"IRELAND."

A Lecture by Rev. J. W. Compton.

Historical Hall was again filled to its capacity on Friday evening last when the Reverend J. W. Compton of Saint Andrew's Church, Kingston, delivered his lecture on "Ireland". Mr. Compton introduced his subject with the statement that he was born in Ulster and throughout his entire lecture he emphasized his great admiration for his native land and its people, regardless of creed.

There were two or three points about the lecture which made those who heard it think much about the country and its future. One was the clear way in which the lecturer explained the present condition of the people making special reference to the change brought about by the Land Bill. He carefully explained how much hope that bill carried to all Irishmen and the wonderful changes for the better produced by its enforcement.

Another point was the lecturer's statement with regard to the feeling in Ireland, and particularly in Ulster County, about Home Rule. The fact that both Protestants and Catholics in that Country, as a rule, favor the measure was news to most of those present and to hear a native Presbyterian clergyman tell of the good feeling existing between his old congregation and the congregation of the Catholic Church in the same village was delightful. Mr. Compton believes that the people of Ireland can be trusted to govern themselves and that the majority in that country will always have in mind what is best for all.

When the question of traditions of that wonderful country was mentioned the lecturer spoke from the heart.

His review of the literature, with readings from some of the most beautiful Irish poems, and his descriptions of life of the people were given with great depth of feeling and everyone was impressed with his great love for Ireland.

Throughout the entire lecture, by means of a splendid series of lantern views, the audience was able to follow, very closely, the different description of the country, its mountains, valleys, cities, churches, schools and public buildings.

The President of the Society in thanking Mr. Compton for giving his lecture expressed the wish that all Canadian citizens could understand the Irish situation as it had been explained by the lecturer.

The President then announced the next meeting for Friday evening, May 30th, when Dr. C. C. James, C. M. G., of Toronto will give a lecture, illustrated by lantern slides, on "Scandinavia".

This will be the annual meeting of the Society and the last meeting this spring. The meeting closed with "God Save the King."

DYNAMITING A DAM CAUSES FATALITY

The explosion of the Hinchinbrook dam in the Napanee river on Monday morning, April 17th, when Mr. Hudson, who lives at the Centreville, lost his life through the rising of the water in the river following the explosion of the Hinchinbrook dam.

Mr. Hudson left his home at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning for Parham. The buggy and horse were found about a half mile from the bridge which was away with Mr. Hudson and his horse.

The dam at Hinchinbrook is a fifth dam and is farthest up the river. It is sometimes known as the "Hinchinbrook dam." This, it is the custom of Napanee Power and Light Company, to keep stopped up time in August and then let it loose, drowning large stretches of land. There is a keen interest among the farmers against the company and on Wednesday evening at 11 o'clock this dam was dynamited by unknown persons and the water washed away the fourth dam.

The waters rose up to the level. It is supposed that the timber bridge all night loosened then the vibration of the horse and crossing it next morning was to make the whole thing give.

On Thursday at noon while eating his dinner, Stanley Clark lives about one mile from the dam was startled by the news that the bridge had been dynamited. He, with Snider, who brought the news for the bridge, and arrived found Frank Snyder and Steve Cumber launching a small boat to make a search for the body of the boat was not successful for the work, so they secured a better boat, in which they found Mr. Clark and Mr. Clark on the search.

They soon found the body of the boat, but the search for the body lasted all day and all night Saturday noon. About 10:30 a.m. the search party to have dinner and Mr. Clark was accompanied by Clark Wagar, member of the search party, and about 11 a.m., found the body of the boat about eight feet of water on the side of the creek less than a mile below the bridge.

The late George Hudson was a bachelor, twenty-five years of age and lived with his mother at Centreville.

It is not known who the dynamiter is, but ex-Warden H. Drew, who has been in the investigation, probably be held. This is the first time the dam has been blown up and it is thought that the farmers injured by the floods and the

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
April 21st, 1913.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor W. A. Steacy in the chair.

Present—Reeve Osborne and Coun- cillors Dickinson, Carson, Simpson, Walters and Alexander.

The minutes of the last regular ses- sion were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the Seymour Power Co., stating that im- mediate steps would be taken to pre- vent any waste oil or tar from the gas house finding its way into the river. Communication filed.

A communication from Mr. F. Burrows stated that he expected to be in Napanee in the near future and would arrange the price for his prop- erty which is needed for drill hall purposes. Filed.

Mr. Samuel Smith, in a letter to the council, asked for a small considera- tion from the town. On Mr. Smith's property, which is located at the ex- treme end of Water street, just outside the town limit, is located a well which continually overflows. Previous to the construction of the Sewage Dis- posal Works a tile drain had been con- structed running from the well across this property and into the river. The building of the disposal works blocked this up, and now Mr. Smith's land, about one acre, is continually flooded with water which renders it unfit for cultivation. What Mr. Smith asks is that the council allow him to tap into the filtration bed of the disposal works.

Referred to the Streets Committee to consult with the engineer and re- port

Two tenders for street watering were read.

Mr. John Barrett offered to do street sprinkling with either the large or small sprinkler at $3.50 per day. Other town teaming at same rate per day.

Mr. John Benn's tender was exactly the same as Mr. Barrett's.

On motion of Reeve Osborne and Councillor Alexander Mr. John Benn was given the large sprinkler.

Councillors Carson and Walters offered an amendment to the motion, that the tenders be referred to the Streets Committee with power to act. The amendment was lost.

On motion of Councillors Dickinson and Simpson Mr. John Barrett was given the small sprinkler.

Coun. Graham entered.

The Poor and Sanitary Committee reported recommending that no action be taken on increase of salary asked for by Nightwatch Perry, but that he be granted a new uniform at a cost not to exceed $30.00. Report adopted.

Coun. Carson gave notice that at the next regular meeting of council he would introduce a by-law regulating the width of tires to be used on all vehicles.

In the Millinery Department

The new hats for spring are so different from those of previous seasons that everyone is eager to see them. The display is a brilliant one, for though most of the hats are small, trimmings of vivid color are greatly in evidence. Another point to be noticed is that many of the smartest hats are very lightly trimmed. A tall mount cleverly confected of feathers, flowers, or ribbons, may be all, but it must be placed "just so," and none but the cleverest and most inspired of milliners can hope to produce the chic and becoming results apparent in these new models.

Dr. G. H. Cowan rendered an account for $67.32. Some years ago he constructed a sewer from his premises connecting with the John street sewer which at that time ended at the south side of Thomas street, at the corner of John and Thomas streets. He was now being asked to pay his proportion according to property frontage, for the recent extension of John street sewer north to G. T. R. station, and wanted to be reimbursed for his first outlay, claiming that the sewer passing his place is of no material benefit to him as he already has sewer connection.

On motion of Councillors Simpson and Alexander the account was ordered laid on the table until after the Court of Revision which will be held next Monday evening.

Council adjourned.

CRISIS IN BELGIUM.

Strikers Silently Awaiting Debate in Chamber of Deputies.

BRUSSELS, April 22.—While upwards of 500,000 men are on strike throughout the country, according to the estimates of the Socialists, both sides seem to be marking time in anticipation of the debate in the Chamber of Deputies to-day on the motion of the Liberal leader, M. Masson, looking to a compromise on the suffrage question.

The Cabinet met yesterday afternoon to consider this subject, but nothing as to the result of the deliberations was vouchsafed to the public.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Belgium, with a membership of 120,000 small traders, have sent an appeal to all the deputies in favor of a solution insuring permanent peace.
The savings bank official report that there have been no more withdrawals than usual, is considered significant.
Batches of strikers' children continue to arrive here from the provinces.

Now Out at Antwerp.

ANTWERP, April 22.—The strikers
at the port of Antwerp were reinforced yesterday by about 4,000 men, bringing the total number up to 25,000 men. This was due to the adhesion of the diamond workers and the shutting down of several minor industries. Several hundred diamond workers with bands and banners paraded the streets in an orderly manner.

More ships arrived here yesterday
than on Saturday, owing to notification being sent out by the steamship companies that no trouble had occured and that they could secure the services of a sufficient number of dockers to load and unload the vessels.

A big firm engaged in the business of building automobile bodies notified
all its employes that those who joined the strike would be instantly dismissed.

CANNOT DISCRIMINATE.

Navy or No Navy Is No Test For Tax
on Overseas Loans.

LONDON, April 22.—(C.A.P. Cable.)
—In the Commons, Norton Griffiths
asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he could now consider the advisability of introducing legislation giving preference to those dominions which supported the Imperial navy directly or indirectly when loans were issued in this country, and a preference to all dominions over foreign countries, by the imposition of a small tax similar to that existing in France, on foreign loans raised in this country.

Lloyd-George: "Under the existing law there is a preference as regards
a stamp duty in respect to loans issued here by the colonial Governments as compared with foreign Governments. No further differentiation would appear advisable."

PROVINCE HAS BARGAIN

Colonization Scheme Will Do a Great Deal For the North.

Hon. Mr. Hearst's Bill Gets Second Reading Despite Efforts of the Opposition to Prove That Section
Through Which Railway Will Run
Is Very Poor and Also Very Rich
—Makes Contracts Easier.

TORONTO, April 22.—A determined attempt was made in the Legislature
by the Liberal Opposition to secure better terms for the extension of provincial benefits of the latest New Ontario scheme of colonization. An amendment, however, calling for a postponement of action and a thorough investigation was voted down, Allan Studholme voting with the Opposition.

In moving for the second reading of the bill respecting the Lake Huron
and Northern Ontario Railway, Hon.
W. H. Hearst gave an explicit statement of the proposals the company has made and described the route of the railway line.

The timber and mineral wealth in the new district was to be left in possession of the crown and was certain to prove a wealthy source of revenue in a few years. The small timber on the land would go to the settler and
the company was pledged to spend
$2,500,000 on saw mills. Large mills
would be built at Bruce Mines and
other points.

U. S. Senators Are Fighting Wool and Sugar Tariff.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Democratic forces in charge of tariff revision in the Senate slightly yielded yesterday to the demands for hearings upon tariff schedules. In addition to the permission given all interested parties to file further statements with the finance committee, Senator Simmons yesterday conceded to a group of western Senators the right to appear and state their arguments against the free wool and free sugar provisions that have been agreed to by the Democrats of the House.

A full meeting of the Senate finance committee is to be held to-day. Republican Senators will then renew their demand that general open hear-

TO ABROGATE TREATY.

U. S. Senator Proposes to Break Hay- Pauncetote Agreement.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Abrogation of the Hay-Pauncetote Treaty and the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty, which preceded it, is the object of a joint resolution which Senator Chamberlain of Oregon prepared yesterday for presentation to the Senate and reference to the foreign relations committee.

Upon the Hay-Pauncetote Treaty, Great Britain bases her protests against free passage for American ships in the Panama Canal, Senator Chamberlain, a leader in the Senate of the free passage exponents, declared yesterday that he considered abrogation of the treaty the easiest and quickest way to get to the bottom of the affairs.

Died at Age of 104.

BRANTFORD, April 22.—Thomas Murray, Brant County's oldest resi-

aged 104 years. He was born in Hamilton, Scotland, and had continuously resided in this county for seventy years. Five children, 16 grandchildren and 19 great-grandchildren survive.
He drove a stage in the early days of the Brant County and was a man of temperate habits all his life.

the land would go to the settler, and
the company was pledged to spend
$2,500,000 on saw mills. Large mills
would be built at Bruce Mines and
other points.

from the crown on 260 miles of the road at the rate of 4,000 acres per mile, making 1,040,000 acres in all. In this connection Mr. Hearst stated that he considered that the Government had secured a bargain from the company. A number of Boards of Trade not only in the north country, but also in New Ontario, had recommended that this line should be constructed and some of them had suggested a grant of 7,400 acres per mile.

The route of the railway has been definitely settled except for details.
The road would begin at Bruce Mines and run north practically midway between the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway on the east and the Algoma Central on the west. In this way an entirely new territory would be opened up. Mr. Hearst estimated that the road would cost between $15,- 000,000 and $20,000,000, and estimated that before the road would be completed there would be 30,000 people in the district. From Bruce Mines the road, he said, would follow the The-salon River and the Mississauga River to the Height of Land. The junction with the main line of the C.P.R. would be at Ridout, while the junction with the Transcontinental would be at a point midway between Hearst and Cochrane.

At the night session Mr. Rowell moved that the bill be given the "six months hoist" and that in the interval the T. & N. O. Railway Commission be requested to investigate whether or not the construction of the railway was in the public interest, and whether it should be built by the province.

He declared that the Government had worked out no comprehensive plan for the opening up of the north country, and that the bill proved this to be the case. A valuable franchise was to be given to a corporation to do that which the Government had failed to do.

Mr. Rowell declared also that according to reports both of the Government and of private engineers, the proposed route of the railway was not the best agricultural district that could have been chosen. The road was said to be a colonization road,
and he argued that if settlers were to be brought into Ontario they should be settled on the best, and not the poorest, land in the province.

"What is the bill, after all?" he asked. "Looking at the bill from the promoters' standpoint, it is quite evident that it is looked upon as a timber proposition."

In concluding, the leader of the Opposition declared that before a million acres of land were given away, the T. & N. O. Commission should have reported on the route.

The debate which followed was participated in by Messrs Grigg, Atkinson, McGarry and Mageau.

It was not until early this morning that the division was taken, when the amendment was defeated 50 to 18.

The bill to amend the Telephone Act was given its third reading. One clause of the bill states that the councils of villages may grant an exclusive franchise to a company for a period of five years without taking a vote of the ratepayers. Another provides that in cities an exclusive franchise may be granted for one year without a vote.

Allan Studholme objected to the two clauses on the ground that the people should be allowed to vote on a telephone franchise.

present law financial men hesitated to give a town a service unless given assurance of a free field for a time.

J. C. Elliott (W. Middlesex) took objection to a clause in the Act Respecting the Revision and Consolidation of the Statutes of Ontario which stated that the revisors could make minor changes in the statutes when they were of the opinion that these changes would meet with the endor-sation of the Legislature. Mr. Elliott protested against the clause claiming that the powers of the Legislature
were delegated to the revisers by it.

Mr. Proudfoot (C. Huron) said the phrase "minor changes" was very indefinite. "The change of one word,"
he said, "might change the entire meaning of the statute."

Sir James stated that the clause was taken verbatim from that in the old act. Sir Oliver Mowat, he said, was the first Premier to make such a provision, and it was continued by all his successors.

At the seventh annual meeting of the Canadian Bible Society, Dr. N. W.
Hoyles of Toronto, was re-elected president.

Marriage In China.

Under the social ideals of China
every man is anxious to marry, but no man is permitted to seek a wife for himself. The contract of marriage is always made by a third party, and often a man finds himself bound to an imbecile, insane or chronically diseased wife, whose father has paid
the marriage broker a high price to get her a husband.

answered Mr. Dorkins. "But don't let that stop you. Go ahead and get it off your mind."

Whereupon he went to sleep again.

CLOSURE MEANS TYRANNY

What the enforcement of closure will mean in Canada was graphically described by Hon. Mr. Oliver in Parliament on Monday when he said:—

"Everybody knows the right of free speech in Parliament was secured as the defence of the people against the tyranny of kings. Tyranny is tyranny, whether it is of a king or of a Parliamentary majority or a political boss. I am not so sure if I had to take my choice that I would not choose the tyranny of a king, who has some sense of dignity, some sense of responsibility and obligation rather than the tyranny of a political boss."

WHAT $35,000,000 MEANS.

What Mr. Borden's first contribution to the British Admiralty really amounts to may be realized from the following figures taken from the financial statements of the several Provinces of the Dominion for the fiscal year 1911. They cover the total expenditure of these provinces for the year and as such include all the outlays on account of the carrying on of government, the salaries of ministers, members and officials, the sums spent on education, agriculture, the work of factory inspection, the management of public lands, mines and forests, provincial fisheries' the administration of the liquor license laws, the establishment and maintenance of hospitals, asylums and public charities, roads, immigration, the administration of marriage, property, civil and criminal laws, the interest on provincial debt and speaking generally, all the functions pertaining to provincial governments which include in some of the provinces the operation of railroads, telephones, hydro-electric power, prison farms, etc.

Canada's aggregate expenditure for the first year after Confederation was $13,488,093—not much more than one-third of Mr. Borden's contribution.

Canada's aggregate expenditure for 1896, the year in which the Laurier Government came to power was $36,940,142—very little in excess of the first Borden contribution.

$350,000 GIVEN FOR $10

Hon. Mr. Oliver Exposes Roger's Method of Favoring Political Friends.

The history of a secret deal by which 80 acres within a mile of the Post Office of the city of Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, which is now listed at $350,000, was allowed to be homesteaded by political friends of Hon. Mr. Rogers at a cost of $10 a few months ago, was revealed in Parliament on Thursday by Hon. Frank Oliver. The details of the whole scheme were clearly shown together with letters and references to conversations which made Hon. Mr. Rogers' statement that he had no personal knowledge of the matter, appear in rather a strange light. But at the crack of the party whip Mr. Borden's followers by a majority of 38 declared that this method of presenting hundreds of thousands of dollars out of the public domain to party friends was a proper thing.

Hon. Mr. Oliver showed that this tract of land had been put under reserve by the Conservative Government of 1895, while the Departmental records proved that it had been reserved from

for it. This land is land within a mile of the Post Office at Prince Albert, and the idea that land so near the centre of the city could properly be made subject to homestead should appeal to anyone who considers the matter as absolutely preposterous.

Mr. Oliver further pointed out that under the Liberal Government the practice was in opening reserve lands for settlement to advertise them. This caused dangerous rushes, so the practice of offering such land by auction, subject to homestead conditions, was adopted. When lands later acquired speculative value, as did this land, it was decided that they should be transferred to School Lands, which would necessitate their being sold by auction, with fair play to all, while the Provincial Treasury would get the real value of the land. This Mr. Oliver proved by quoting instances where it had been done.

Had the Liberal practice been followed by Hon. Mr. Rogers the country would be anywhere from $100,000 to $350,000 richer.

WILLING TO GIVE C

Jefferson's Admirer Was Mix Rose to the Occasion

Jefferson was the most story teller I have ever known. Mary Shaw in the Century, "The Human Side of Jefferson." His varied life and events were wonderfully interesting. We were in Terre Haute, Indiana theater was near a hotel. One of the cab and were strolling the hotel corridor when a pious man came up to Mr. Jefferson frequently did, and, his hand, said:

"Mr. Jefferson, you do not but I know you very well, am very glad to see you in You are a great actor. I you ever since I was a little looked fully as old as Mr. Jefferson." "and I have always looked your visit to this place."

He went on praising Mr. Jefferson presently said:

"I thank you very much, very kind."

Upon which the old gentleman

dollars out of the public domain to party friends was a proper thing.

Hon. Mr. Oliver showed that this tract of land had been put under reserve by the Conservative Government of 1895, while the Departmental records proved that it had been reserved from the public at large throughout the whole of the Laurier Administration and until J. S. Donaldson, M.L.A. for Shellbrook, and Conservative Whip of the Saskatchewan Legislature desired to secure it as a "homestead."

The story as outlined by Hon. Mr. Oliver was that according to his information Donaldson was one of a delegation from Prince Albert, who visited the Ottawa Government in January 1912. They tried to get hold of "something good" but could not. Donaldson, however, more favoured, got on the track of this 80 acres, and later wrote Hon. Mr. Rogers on his own behalf.

Hon. Mr. Rogers had said that he had no personal knowledge of the transaction, but Mr. Oliver produced a letter from Donaldson to Hon. Mr. Rogers dated February 14th, 1912, referring to former conversations with Mr. Rogers regarding this land, enclosing a map showing its exact location and asking for permission to apply scrip upon it. "I am bound to assume from Mr. Rogers' statement," said Mr. Oliver, "that he never saw that letter. But I can only say in view of the circumstances which followed that the method of conducting the affairs of the department of the Interior is certainly worthy of very serious criticism. This land which has been under reserve since 1895 to February 1912 at once came into action."

There was considerable correspondence after Donaldson's delegation and the officials of the Interior Department reported that this land appeared to be vacant and that there should be no objection to applying scrip to the first applicant, provided it was posted or advertised in the usual way.

At this very time, however a letter written by John S. Fowley on February 21st, 1913, referred to a personal interview with Hon. Mr. Rogers, when he was informed by the Interior Department that there was no land in that vicinity for homestead entry, which showed that it was then under reserve, so that there was no justification for Mr. Rogers' statement that it had been left out by mistake of the previous Government.

This is some remarkable way this land suddenly ceased to be under reserve. On April 13th the Assistant Secretary of the Department at Ottawa, wrote a final official letter of inquiry to the Agent at Prince Albert. Evidently some echo of this letter leaked out because on April 16th, Arthur Donaldson, son of J. S. Donaldson, M.L.A., applied for the land and was granted homestead entry to this city property at a cost of $10.00. Shortly afterwards he avoided homestead duties by cancelling the homestead entry and getting a patent to the land under half-breed scrip, while Hon. Mr. Rogers pointed out that there was apparently not even a pretence of enforcing the regulation to post or advertise such property for ten days.

Thus, said Hon. Mr. Oliver, "Donaldson finds this land is not privately owned while he is on a visit to Ottawa. He exercises his pull with the Minister by a letter of February 14th: whether the letter reached the Minister or not the pull evidently worked, and on April 16th Donaldson's son is the owner of a $100,000 homestead at a total cost of $10.00. This land is afterwards placed under half-breed scrip. To-day it is offered as a sub-division of the city of Prince Albert and listed at a price of $350,000. This is not a business transaction in the interests of the people of Canada and I protest most energetically against being directly, indirectly or any way held responsible

Hon. Geo. P. Graham on Tuesday introduced an amendment to the Railway Act, the useful import of which will be recognized by every Railway employee in Canada. It provides that any Railway Company desiring to change the location of its terminals must first secure the approval of the Railway Commission and undertake to pay all losses sustained by its employees who are thus obliged to change their places of residence.

The immediate cause of the Bill was the proposal of the Grand Trunk to change its terminals from Brockville to Prescott, which will involve the moving of hundreds of men, the breaking up of long established homes and in many instances, the leaving of houses which represent the life savings of the men, and leaving them in a position where the removal of the terminals would greatly reduce their value.

The provisions of the Bill were so eminently just that it was not even opposed by the government and its principle was accepted by the Minister of Railways, who intimated that it was not greatly objected to by the Railway Companies.

This legislation will of course benefit every railway employee in Canada with the exception of the Intercolonial and the Government railway system, which are kept outside the jurisdiction of the Railway Commission by the Government.

A CRIME AGAINST LIBERTY.

Hon. Mr. Oliver discussing the closure in Parliament April 14th:

"I ask you, are we likely to inspire appreciation of and reverence for the ideals of British liberty, British justice and British fair play by preventing the representatives of our people from giving free expression to their views in a free parliament? I say this resolution is a crime against liberty, and an offence against Canada and against the Empire; and all the greater because it is committed under the pretence of British precedent. The conditions here and in Britain are not in parallel: none of the reasons which require closure there, exist here. The attempt to shelter the establishment of boss rule in Canada, according to the American practice in its lowest form, behind the need of expediting work in the parliament of the Empire—which transacts the business of forty-five millions of people directly, and indirectly the business of one half the world—and doing so in the name of loyalty to the Empire, is outrageous beyond expression, and I say, Mr. Speaker, that political brigandage never went further in cowardice and treachery under any circumstances or in any country."

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A CONFESSION AND A CONCLUSION.

Confession—"A parliament should not sit, as we have sat, for nearly five months since the 21st day of November last, and practically accomplish nothing at all in respect to the public business which is before it. If parliament can be detained in that way for five months without making any substantial progress with the programme of the government of the day it can be detained twelve months, or fifteen months, or eighteen months."

Parliamentary institutions under such conditions would be practically useless."—Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden in speech in House of Commons, April 9, 1913.

Conclusion—It all depends on the government and who is at its head.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was Prime Minister for 15 years, but never once was obliged to make a confession of incompetence either on his own or his government's behalf.

Verdi's Verdict.

At his home in Genoa, one evening in 1890, Verdi sat down to his piano and played some of the music from the score of "Cavalleria Rusticana." Boito and Tebaldini were present at the time. When the "grand old man" of music came to the end of the duet between Alfredo and Santuzza he cried out, "Enough of this sort of thing," and rose from the piano. Quite a long time afterward Mascagni heard the sequel to the incident. On the morning after it occurred Tebaldini met Verdi and remarked that the latter looked tired. Verdi explained that he had sat up to a very late hour of the night. "After you left," he went on, "I went back to the piano and once more tried over 'Cavalleria,' and it gradually conquered my prejudice and made a great impression on me. There is so much sincerity in its melodies that, in spite of myself, I could not help going on with it, and now I must admit that the work pleases me vastly." And he added, "Here is a young man who will make a name for himself."

Reason For Waiting.

A certain young woman, although she is a trained stenographer, typewriter and bookkeeper, had very bad luck in trying to obtain a position at even a fair salary. Though there was no joke in the continual disappointments, she found a funny side to one experience. The manager of a place whose advertisement she answered told her that the salary paid at first would be $8 a week, that by the end of the year it would be increased to $9, while by the third year she would receive the magnificent sum of $10. Mechanically she agreed to let him know and went out. Apparently she had made a good impression, for when a couple of days had gone by she received a note asking whether she wanted the position or not. She sat down and wrote: "Dear Sir—Of course I intended to accept the position. I am simply waiting for the two years to pass, so that I can begin at $10 per. Yours truly,"—New York Times.

Upon which the old gentleman on:

There was a moment of silence then Mr. Jefferson said:

"I think you are mistaken Rip Van Winkle. You met Mr. Thompson. He plays J. comb."

The effusive gentleman paused enough to collect his wits, said cheerfully:

"Oh, yes! So you are the who played Rip Van Winkle you're good too."

It is a tragedy of the British museum this priceless treasure was to pieces by an insane visitor, however, been repaired with and is now guarded with care. This beautiful specimen of glass is ten inches in height, with a diameter at its broadest part of four inches. Its present name comes from the fact that it was once in the Duke of Portland, who gave it to the British museum in 1786.

Custard.

Concerning custard, or "custard" as it was formerly called, it was a common joke at civic feasts in England the olden time to place a custard in the middle of the table, which at some stage of the performance the clown unexpectedly jumped upon. Jonson uses the term "custard" of one who "in tall of dinner" took "his ainmal le custard" to "make my lady and her sisters laugh all the over their shoulders."

MENDING A CABLE

The Snapping of a Submarine Line Entails Hard Work.

LOCATING THE BREAK IS EASY.

This Is Accomplished by the Use of Sensitive Instruments, and Then Comes the Difficult Task of Grappling
and Raising the Severed Ends.

The 700 mile cable that connected Hamilton, Bermuda, with Halifax, Nova Scotia, had snapped. Somewhere under many fathoms of water lay the two broken ends, perhaps only a few inches apart—more likely half a mile or so from each other—carried from their accustomed bed by the wash of the waves. Until the two ends were connected the thousands and thousands of dollars invested in the cable were bringing no income.

As the result of the accident Hamilton was practically isolated from the rest of the world, for the only other cable went to Jamaica. By sending a message to Jamaica and having it relayed to Newfoundland and thence by telegraph to New York it was possible to get a few words through in a fairly short time. But the tolls were enormously high.

The moment the operator at Halifax
found that the key on the Bermuda cable did not respond to his touch he reported the fact to his superior in the Halifax office. Orders flew back and forth, telephone bells rang, messengers scurried in and out of the office, and in a few hours the cable repair steamer was on its way to Bermuda.

The operators at Halifax and Hamilton had located the break. It was about six miles from the Hamilton end of the cable. This they calculated with sensitive instruments used to record the "resistance."

The writer was in Hamilton when the Mackay-Bennett steamed into the harbor and through the courtesy of the captain was on board when the steamer went out and grappled for the ends of the cable and restored it to usefulness.

Even when the captain of a cable repair ship knows that the break is about six miles from one end it's no easy affair to pick up the big wire ropes.
The floor of the ocean is uneven, and he must allow for slack.

The crew was ready when the ship stopped. With a splash the big grapnel went overboard, and yard after yard of line was paid out until the hook touched bottom. The water was 120 fathoms (720 feet) deep at that spot.

Luck was with the cable ship. So well had the captain calculated that the very first cast of the hook brought up one end of the broken cable. It was hauled on board. The electricians attached their instruments and called Hamilton. The station answered immediately.

A huge buoy was attached to the heavy wire rope and lowered into the water. Then we set out to find the other end.

MOTHERHOOD SUGGESTIONS

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted
for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock
from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that,
with all the evidence of shattered nerves
and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time
in which to prepare, women will persist
in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invig-orator of the female organism.

In many homes
once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal,
healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to dential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will

STAGE FRIGHT.

Not Even a Veteran Is Wholly Free
From the Disease.

It is said that there are really few public personages who are free from liability to stage fright. The veteran is as likely to be affected as the novice.
Frequently the attack comes when least expected, and, no matter how often the speaker or the artist may have faced an audience, he can never feel quite certain that he will not undergo the tortures of this form of nervousness.

It is a curious fact nevertheless that stage fright sometimes stimulates instead of hopelessly confusing the speaker or performer. There is a story to the effect that a friend of Canning once observed to him just as that great man was about to address the house of commons on an important measure: "Why, your hands are cold and clammy. You are nervous."

"In that case," Canning is reported to have replied, "I shall make a good speech." And the prediction was fully verified, since the orator was at his very best on that occasion.

THE ZERO MARK.

Origin of the Mathematical Symbol
That Stands For Nothing.

It is the peculiar triumph of the mathematicians who constructed the Hindu Arabic numerals that they were led to invent a symbol for "nothing."
The invention arose out of the difficulty which was encountered when calculations were transferred from the ancient abacus board and became a written operation.

On the abacus board, which may perhaps be seen still in infants' schools,
the rows of beads or counters represented the numerals 1 to 9, but each counter or bead in the row above represented ten times as great a value as the row below. Thus 591 could be transferred from abacus board to paper without difficulty, but 5 (0) 1 taken from the abacus might be 51, since the vacant place was no longer indicated.

Accordingly mathematicians were led to invent a character for the vacant place. The invention of this symbol for "nothing" with the crowning, transcendent achievement in the perfection of the decimal system and the use of the

Accordingly mathematicians were led to invent a character for the vacant place. The invention of this symbol for "nothing" with the crowning, transcendent achievement in the perfection of the decimal system and lay at the base of all subsequent arithmetical progress. Among the Hindus the symbol was at first a dot, but it was soon superseded by a circle, O. Its symbol, says Professor E. R. Turner in a magazine article on the numerals, has varied greatly, and its name has a pedigree of its own. The Hindus called it sunya—void. In Arabic this became sifr.

In 1202 Leonardo Fibonacci translated it zephirum. In 1330 Maximus Planudes called it tziphra. During the fourteenth century Italian writers shortened it to zenero and cenro, which became zero, now in general use. Meanwhile it has passed more nearly in Arabic form into French as chiffre and into English as cipher, taking on new significations.

Beadle and Minister.

A story is told about a west country minister and his beadle, showing the familiarity that used to exist between the minister and his man. The minister and John had got into an argument and it became so hot that John was like to lose his temper. The minister naturally tried to throw oil on the troubled waters.

"Man, John," he said, "it's a good thing we are not all of one mind. For example, had everybody been of my mind everybody would have been wanting my good wife Janet."

"Very true," replied John a little surly, "for if everybody had been in the same mind as me naebody would have ta'en her ava. She may mak' a guid enough minister's wife, but she would have made a purr show aside my Jean!"—London Answers.

Superstitious Miners.

Coal strikes have sometimes been threatened in England on curious grounds. In 1874 a woman was employed as a messenger at one of the collieries near Oswestry. As she commenced her day's work very early, she often met the miners on their way to the pit, and as the men considered it a bad omen to meet a woman first thing in the morning, trouble arose. By threats and persuasion they tried to get the offending female to give up her job, but, falling in this, they went in a body to the manager and flatly refused to go down until the woman had been dismissed.

A Punning Match.

Father ruefully gazed on his last shilling.

"Money has wings, and house rents make it fly," he said.

"Yes," said his fifteen-year-old son, "and some houses have wings, for I've seen many a house fly."

"You're smarter than your old dad, maybe, my son, but I always thought that no part of a house except the chimney flew!"—London Tit-Bits.

It Reminded Him.

"The dew is falling," she said. "Let us go in before it settles."

"Yes," he answered, but a worried look stole into his face. Little did she dream that with him many dews were falling and that he was utterly unable to settle.—Judge.

measured.
A huge buoy was attached to the heavy wire rope and lowered into the water. Then we set out to find the other end.

Cast after cast of the grappling hook and not even a nibble from the missing part of the cable. Farther and farther the cable ship worked away from the buoy. At last, after three hours' work, the grapple resisted the pull. The fish had been caught. There was a cheer from the crew as it was pulled on board, about a quarter of a mile from the other end.

This end was connected with a telegraph instrument, and the operator at Halifax, about 700 miles away, answered. There was nothing more to do except to join the broken ends.

A new section of cable was carefully spliced to the cable that had just been picked up. The cable was paid out over the stern as we steamed back to the buoy. This was hauled on board and the broken end spliced to the new piece of cable, an operation consuming less than half an hour. The repaired cable, as good as new, was dropped overboard to resume its place on the ocean's bed.

Rarely does a cable repair ship have such good luck. Often storms arise which drive the ship from her course, tear the buoys from the ends they hold and compel the work to be done over again.

In northern waters these conditions are felt at their worst. The ship becomes crusted with ice, it is difficult to maneuver and doubly so to deal with a cable on bow or stern when the roll of the seas threatens to fracture it again, and the launching of boats with men in them to buoy a loose end is hazardous.

From these causes occasionally cable ships get short of coal and have to abandon work temporarily at critical periods, or they are enmeshed among the ice floes or bergs and have to let go all and retreat.—Karl K. Kitchen in New York World.

"In that case," Canning is reported to have replied, "I shall make a good speech." And the prediction was fully verified, since the orator was at his very best on that occasion.

For obvious reasons musicians are among the worst sufferers from stage fright. One artist trembles, another perspires excessively, a third suffers from headache, and a fourth is consumed with a terrible thirst. Its most embarrassing manifestation, chiefly among those performing upon stringed instruments, lies in the nervous trembling of the bow when sustained notes are attempted.

Pianists, too, have their troubles in this respect, and many artists have told of cases wherein "their fingers ran away with them." Singers experience a "catch in the throat" that is deadly, to say nothing of a twitching of the lips, fatal to clear enunciation.

It is related that Rubinstein, in the height of his powers, gave over the profits of a lucrative engagement for no other reason than that he suffered an attack of this curious malady.—Harper's Weekly.

ANCIENT MONOPOLIES.

A Corner In Corn In the Early Days of the Egyptians.

The evil of monopolies and rings was known to ancients, Aristotle referring to them in his "Politics," and then, as now, it was found necessary to hold them in check by legislation. The monopolist was in Roman law called a dardanarius and punished under the Lex Julia de Annona. Monopolies of clothing, fish and all articles of food were prohibited by the Emperor Zeno under pain of confiscation and exile, so that it is certain that the rings of the ancient days were as mischievous as they are now. At Athens a law limited the amount of corn a man might buy. The earliest recorded instance we have was a corn ring.

There is an ancient tradition that the king who made Joseph his prime minister and committed into his hands the entire administration of Egypt was Apepi. Apepi was one of the shepherd kings and ruled over the whole of Egypt as Joseph's pharaoh seems to have done. The prime minister during seven years of remarkable plenty bought up every bushel of corn beyond the absolute needs of the Egyptians and stored it. During the terrible famine that followed he was able to get his own price and bartered corn successively for the Egyptian money, cattle and land and, taking one-fifth for pharaoh, made him supremely wealthy. It was not merely a provident act, but a very politic one, his policy being to centralize power in the monarch's hands.—London Answers.

Dangerous Golf.

One of the rules of the Westox super Mare (England) Golf club reads, "A ball may be lifted and dropped with the loss of a stroke when played within the railings surrounding the powder magazine." There appears to be an element of danger in this kind of golf which reminds a London writer of a certain golf course on the West African coast, where the eighth and ninth holes are always optional, as several golfers are said to have been lost there owing to the proximity of the jungle, which is known to be a favorite lair of the lion.

Every range of expression was brought out, from the storm and thunder of Rossini's Overture, Wm. Tell, to the violin solos of Mendelssohn. Mr. Habbeshaw captured his audience from the first number and was forced to respond to encores to nearly every selection. It would be hard to specify any special selection as being superior when all were so good, but "Total Eclipse from the Oratorio of Samson," was so affecting as to thrill the audience. "Be Thou Faithful," "My Hope is in the Everlasting God," "Mountain Lovers," were also greatly enjoyed, as was also an encore, "My Pretty Jane." ### I. O. D. E.

At the regular meeting of Loyalist Chapter, on April 1st, Regent paid the following: our two members whom we recently lost:

"You are all aware, ladies, of the reason for the postponement of our regular monthly meeting, on the 14th inst. It is therefore our duty to announce to you for loss to this chapter, of two members, at the hands of reaper."

Both these ladies were our first members and belonged to that passing, being women of old school.

It is a question whether the conditions of life will produce compromising and sterling characteristics in the future. We mourn, with a deep sense of loss, the passing of these souls.

These deaths being the first of our ranks from such a cause, coming so suddenly, within a few days of each other, is a very sad visitation. It causes us to pause and think of the awesomeness of the uncertainty of human life. After all "We stuff as dreams are made of, little life is rounded with a sleep."

In Mrs. Symington's death chapter is deprived of the accruing to it from the intellectual and intellectual woman had already benefitted by her ability during the first winter existence at a chapter of the order, and doubtless would further profited had she been to us.

Mrs. Symington was an accomplished traveller, whose mind had been broadened through contact with ideas and peoples.

As was so well expressed by Rev'd. J. P. Wilson in his address "Our departed sister doing Empire Work," she was an empire builder in the best sense of the term; for she was building in the youth of the community at her feet as their teacher and for the experiences an

A Lost Chance.

Years ago a man named Saltmann
owned an estate in Griqualand, South Africa, and adjoining his property was an old, rundown farm that had not been worked on account of its poor soil and lack of necessary water. The owner of the farm met Herr Saltmann one day and offered to trade the farm for an old waistcoat he had seen him wear-burden himself with a piece of worthless land, he kindly refused the offer.

A few years later big, clear diamonds were found on this waste stretch, and now thousands of pounds could not purchase it.—London Mail.

THE CHAFING DISH.

Antiquity of This New Popular Cook- ing Utensil.

The chafing dish is not a utensil of modern invention. Looking backward over history's pages, many allusions are made to its use. Among the ruins of Pompeii have been found bronze chafing dishes of unique designs, and Mommsen, in his "Römische Geschichte," asserts that in those days a well wrought cooking machine came to cost more than an estate. Louis XV. took much delight in cooking and, according to Goncourt, often amused himself by making "quintessential stews in silver pans." The palate of Louis XIV, was often tickled by "piping hot dishes brought in on a chafing dish."

Napoleon Bonaparte, when laying down the affairs of war and enjoying home life for a short period, cooked in a silver chafing dish an omelet for the enjoyment of the empress and himself. Mme. Recamier, the beautiful and intellectual society leader, used the chafing dish, while Mme. de Stael, the greatest woman in literary history, when exiled from her beloved France took with her the chafing dish.

We of today are doing much to keep alive the true spirit of hospitality by bringing the chafing dish into popular use.—Woman's Home Companion.

PETRIFIED BODIES.

Their Organic Materials Are Replaced by Mineral Particles.

In answer to the query, "Do biologists or chemists know the process of petrification or the reason why a human body or a plant in some cases takes the course of petrification instead of decaying?" we would say:

The process is at first one of decay slowly and replacement particle by particle of the organic material by inorganic or mineral. Water holding siliceous minerals in saturated solution is necessary, the flesh or plant disorganizes, the carbon, oxygen, nitrogen, hydrogen compounds disintegrate and escape, and the minute portion is replaced by the mineral particle, the shape or form of the decaying body remaining intact.

Now, the carbon in the bodies does not change to siliceous minerals. It disappears in its combination with the other elements. No element changes into another; this would be mutation. Replacement is the word used here. Thus analyze a petrified man or plant —no organic matter can be found—only inorganic, and this weighs far more than did the animated body. The entire process of petrification is a mysterious work of nature.—New York American.

Authors and Novel Reading.

The objection professed by many women novelists against reading fiction may be based on the same grounds as those raised by the little boy at the tea party who refused to eat jam "cos father makes it." Some distinguished writers in other fields have been voracious novel readers. Concerning the author of the standard work on the British constitution Grant Duff relates: "Bagehot, like Sir Henry Maine, Sir James Stephen and Sir George Vennables, had a perfect passion for

WHY JESUS DIED FOR SINNERS ALL

We Have All Erred Seriously in the Past.

The Penalty For Sin, According To the Bible, Contradicts Our Creeds—The Bible Theory Is Reasonable—A Ransom-Price For Sinners Was Necessary Under the Penalty—How It Could Have Been Different.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 20. — Pastor Russell's topic in the Brooklyn Academy of Music today was, "The Necessity for Jesus' Death." His text was: "In due time Christ died for the ungodly"—Romans 5:6.

The speaker declared that while the Bible everywhere emphasizes the importance of Jesus' death, yet Christians to-day seem to be perplexed upon the subject. Some claim that neither His life nor His death was different from that of other men. Others claim that Jesus came into the world to show mankind how to live and died for a good cause. Others in bewilderment declare that they see no relationship between Jesus' death and what they have been taught is the penalty for sin; viz., eternal torment.

In general, said the Pastor, there is confusion upon the subject, and only those who get the proper focus on the question of why Christ died can be mentally at rest, and enter sympathetically into the great Plan of God, of which the death of Jesus for human redemption is a part.

The Pastor protested against the too common practice of accepting a portion of the Bible and rejecting the remainder. He declared that any man wise enough to criticize the inspired Word should be accepted as an inspired authority, capable of writing a better statement of the Divine Plan. He believes that the Holy Scriptures, as St. Paul declares, were written aforetime by holy men for the admonition of the Church, because God wishes His people to understand His arrangements. We should hold fast "the faith once delivered to the saints," and not allow the wisdom of men to make the Word of God of none effect. He reminded his hearers that Jesus reproved the Pharisees for neglecting the Word of God and preferring the traditions of men—the ancients.

Our English Bible, said he, does not profess to be the Word of God, but merely a translation of it. If, therefore, we find mistranslations which misrepresent the original Scriptures, we should promptly correct these, and admit that the translations are not inspired.

Jesus Died To Meet Man's Penalty.

Orthodox creeds do not dispute that there is a penalty against mankind. These creeds agree that Adam, father of humanity, was created perfect, in the moral image of his Maker; but that he had sinned and come under a penalty because of that sin. All man-

MONTREAL MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 21.—There was a fairly good enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba wheat, oats and barley, but, as there was no improvement in prices bid, which were all out of line with values here, no business was done. The local market for coarse grains was also quieter, but the feeling is firm. Flour firm, with a fair demand for local and country account, but the export trade was quieter. Millfeed dull and easy. The tone of the market for butter is weaker, and prices are lower, owing to the increased offerings and the somewhat limited demand from both local and outside buyers. Cheese dull. Eggs active. Provision market steady, with fair demand.

Antics of a Comedian.

In "The Autobiography of Mme. Judith" the author, a famous French actress, tells this story of Bouffe, the comedian, who, it appears, was fond of displaying his versatility in the street. On one occasion he said, "You just wait a minute, Judith, and I'll make you laugh."

He went to the edge of the pavement, and, with head bent back, hunched up shoulders, pinched features, head shaking piteously and tottering gait, he had suddenly become an old man. . . . Thus metamorphosed, he tapped on the pavement with his stick, tottered to the edge of the road, made a few trembling steps to cross it and then, seeing a carriage coming, started back and feebly endeavored to step up on the curbstone again.

Finally when a little work girl compassionately helped him, remarking, "Poor old fellow, your dancing days are a long way off," Bouffe of a sudden turned head over heels, after which he pirouetted several times, made the girl a low bow and left her simply petrified with astonishment.

Sabbath Morn in Glasgow.

It was Sunday morning, and the conductor as his bus rattled along was perhaps not so wide awake as usual. At all events he didn't observe the small boy who dashed out of an entry, piping, "Hi, there; stop!" and it was only when the stout old gent next the door had prodded him in the leg that the official became aware of the pursuing figure. "Stop the bus for the boy, conductor," observed the prodder. The conductor looked disparagingly at the chasing boy, but, seeing that he was holding up a penny, decided he must be a passenger and stopped the bus. "Now, then, shaver, hop on," he said when the boy panted up. "Who are you callin' 'shaver?'" inquired the youth scornfully. "An' what d'you mean by runnin' away from yer customers? 'Ere; mother wants two 'a'pennies for this penny. She's goin' to church."—Glasgow News.

LOST VITALITY

Caused by Kidney, Stomach and Bowel Disorders.

St. John, N. B., Sept. 18th, 1911.
My brother was a great sufferer from kidney, stomach and bowel troubles and was given up by two doctors. He was advised to try your Fig Pills, which he did, and after taking five boxes was completely restored to health and is better to-day than he has been for years. You can't recommend Fig Pills too highly.

At all dealers, 25 and 50 cents or The Fig Pill Co., St. Thomas, Ont.

These creeds agree that Adam, father of humanity, was created perfect, in the moral image of his Maker; but that he had sinned and come under a penalty because of that sin. All mankind, having inherited life from him, share his condemnation to death. God, having sentenced man to death, cannot consistently deal with the sinner. Hence He arranged that Jesus should recover Adam and his posterity from that condemnation—in order that they might have opportunity to return to harmony with Him, and thus to everlasting life.

This, said the Pastor, is clearly set forth in both Old and New Testaments. If we could forget our creeds and the false theories which they inculcate, these Scriptures would guide us without difficulty. Christendom is handicapped by the creeds of the Dark Ages, which confuse us. For instance, creeds teach that the curse of God against mankind is eternal torment.

"The Wages of Sin Is Death."

Most emphatically the Bible declares the wages of sin to be death—not torment. Let any should think that only the body dies, but that the soul continues to live, the Scriptures say, "The soul that sins shall die." "God is able to destroy both soul and body in Gehenna"—The Second Death. The penalty against Adam, "Dying, thou shalt die," signifies the death of his soul—his entire being. Under that sentence Adam and his race, unless redeemed, would have no future life.

But God from the very beginning purposed to redeem man from this death sentence. He purposed to send forth His Son to pay man's redemption price—to die for man. Christ's redemptive work would restore man's soul from the power of the tomb by a resurrection from the dead. St. Paul expresses this smatter in few words, saying, "As by man came death (not eternal torment), by man comes also the resurrection of the dead. For as all in Adam die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order."

The favors which God has promised to man through Christ will come in due season. They will make earth a Paradise again, with nothing to hurt or destroy. All mankind will then be privileged to return, if willing, to the image of God, lost by Adam, but redeemed by Christ.

The secreted savings of the natives of India are believed to amount to something like $1,500,000,000 in gold alone.

Galvanized Iron.

Iron is galvanized by plunging the metal into molten zinc, which forms an alloy on the surface to prevent rust.

Diligence increaseth the fruit of toil. A dilatory man wrestles with losses.

The Roman Forum.

From the age of Tiberius to that of Constantine the history of the Roman forum is represented, says Professor Lanciani, by four great fires followed by three great restorations. The first was that of Nero in 65. The second was that of Titus in 80. The third was in the reign of Commodus, 191. The fourth took place in 283, in the days of Carinus. A century later occurred the abolition of pagan worship, which is mentioned as the first incident in the destruction of the forum. Yet the place was in a tolerable degree of preservation as late as the beginning of the sixth century.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 21.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ended April 19 were 1460 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 2700 hogs and 2800 calves. Today's offerings amounted to 1160 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 700 calves.

The supply of cattle was smaller than this day week, and drovers generally were all asking higher prices at the opening of the market, which buyers refused to pay, consequently the market was rather dull, but when prices were reduced business picked up. A few picked, extra choice steers sold as high as $7.75, but the bulk of the trade in a jobbing way was done in choice steers at $7.25 to $7.50, while full loads of choice stock brought $6.90 to $7, and good $6.50 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.

The trade in sheep and lambs was slow, owing to the very limited number coming forward, and prices ruled firm, but the demand for calves was good, of which the offerings were fair at steady prices, and a few spring lambs were sold at from $5 to $8 each.

In sympathy with the advance in prices of 15c to 20c per 100 pounds in the Toronto market at the latter end of last week, a stronger feeling prevailed in the local market today, and prices were 10c to 25c higher than on Wednesday last, with a good demand from packers, and sales of selected lots were made at $10.25 to $10.35 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7 to $7.50; do., medium, $5.25 to $6.25; do., common, $4.50 to $5; canners, $4 to $4.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6 to $6.25; do., medium, $5 to $5.75; do., bulls, $4 to $6.25; milkers, choice, each, $7.50 to $8.00; do., common and medium, each, $6.50 to $7.00; springers, $5.50 to $6.00.

Sheep, ewes, $6.75 to $7.25; bucks and culls, $6.25 to $6.50; lambs, $8.50 to $9.

Hogs, f.o.b., $10.25 to $10.35.

Calves, $1 to $10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, April 21.—Cattle—Receipts, 15,000; market steady. Beefers, $7.40 to $9.25; Texas steers, $6.85 to $8; western steers, $7.10 to $8.20; stockers and feeders, $6.10 to $8.15; cows and heifers, $4 to $8.50; calves, $6.50 to $8.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 42,000; market weak. Light, $8.85 to $9.20; mixed, $8.80 to $9.15; heavy, $8.60 to $9.10; rough, $8.60 to $8.75; pigs, $6.90 to $9.10; bulk of sales, $9 to $9.10.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 22,000; market steady to 10c up; native, $6 to $7.25; western, $6.20 to $7.25; yearlings, $6.50 to $8.25; lambs, native, $6.60 to $8.75; western, $6.90 to $8.65.

GIVE YOUR BOY A FARM

Every farmer wants to provide for his sons, but seldom will the old homestead, developed with toil, suffice to meet their needs. The boys have been brought up to the land. They are familiar with all the phases of farming. They should have land of their own. How is the farmer going to meet this emergency?

The Logical Answer is Western Canada.

Thousands of acres, divided into 160 acre farms, are being thrown open for entry by the Dominion Government along or near the lines of the

The land gives a wide chance. There are some plots on the open prairie and others again in the well-wooded, well-watered districts in

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Don't forget this.

"The sudden change in his manner unnerved me, for the tears started to my eyes, and I stood gaping at him. As a matter of fact, I was thoroughly disconcerted and taken aback. As soon as Rubinstein saw this his face changed again, and, laughing, he held out his hand to me apologetically.

"Well, come; give me a kiss and I will play for you!"

"I had just reached the age when my kisses were not lightly given. Besides, I was cut to the heart's core, and I turned my head away in denial.

"What!" cried one of the women present. "Could you refuse Anton Gregoriowitch?"

"Yes," cried Rubinstein, "and just for that I am going to play for her anyhow, for she is the first that ever did!"

"Rubinstein was in one of his rarest moods, and those of us who were present will never forget the ineffable beauty of the Chopin F major ballade as he started the opening theme, one of the wonder pieces of that composer whom Rubinstein had designated 'die Seele des Forteplano.' When he had finished the ballade he passed, almost without a pause, to the preludes, four of which he played. Then he dashed into his favorite mazurka and ended with the heroic F sharp minor polonaise. Across the room I could see some figures huddled, as it were, in fear and terror. The thunders of that music rang through the room. It was as if the Polish legions were marching, swords outstretched, banners flying.

MOODS OF THE GREAT MASTER

The Climax to an Evening With the Composer in His Home in St. Petersburg,
When His Efforts at the Piano
Left Him Ashen Faced and Exhausted

In her "Recollections of Rubinstein," published in Harper's Magazine, Lillian Nichla throws some new lights on the character and temperament of one of the famous composers of the last century. Her earliest acquaintance with Rubinstein was when, as a child, she resided with her parents in Dublin. She afterward traveled with him during an English tour that the composer made and met him again in St. Petersburg at a rehearsal, when the great master invited her to dinner that same evening. The author says:

"I spent the rest of the afternoon practising, and a little before 6 o'clock found myself at last in Rubinstein's study amid all his intimate associations, touching the books and music that belonged to him, sitting before the piano he played on, glancing over the pages of manuscripts that he had just finished—in short, at home with him. I found then that he was no longer the sphinx man of the concert platform, but a genial, gracious host, asking after the friends I had recently left in Frankfurt and making inquiries after those in Ireland and England, especially after all young artists, for whom he had a heart flowing over with kindness and sympathy. Possibly his own student days in Vienna, when he had literally starved, had something to do with this. At the dinner table I found out he was thoroughly a bon vivant.

"After dinner I had to go through the ordeal of playing for him, and, when I had finished, his manservant brought in a card table, and we sat down to a game of whist, a difficult sort of whist, much like present day bridge. Rubinstein and I were partners and lost shamefully—scarcely to be wondered at, for I had just learned whist—but he insisted on playing again and again.

"Matve, the servant, then brought in tea in the long Russian glasses with their silver holders, lemon, not cream, being served, and one of the ladies present, knowing I was a newcomer and ignorant of the fact that it was an unwritten law as unalterable as that of the Medes and Persians that his guests should not ask him to play, whispered to me to make him go to the piano. Cheerfully and innocently I went up to him and, running my arm through his, said coaxingly:

"Do come and play something?"

"His face changed in a moment. An ominous silence fell on those present. Even the culprit who had led me into the trap looked disturbed. As for Rubinstein himself, he gave me a scowl and fairly flung my hand away.

"No," he said shortly. "I never play.

with the heroic H sharp minor polonaise. Across the room I could see some figures huddled, as it were, in fear and terror. The thunders of that music rang through the room. It was as if the Polish legions were marching, swords outstretched, banners flying, hastening to die like heroes for faith and country, singing their love songs gallantly, although the funeral dirge was to follow.

"When Rubinstein had finished his face was ashen white, his breath was coming in gasps, and he was laboring under the excitement caused by that malady which, alas, a few years later was to carry him off! None of us guessed it then, for, brawny of build, impatient of sympathy, scorning all bodily weaknesses, he hid his sufferings from those about him till too late. He had almost reached his sixtieth year, for fifty years subjecting himself mercilessly to the fierce and absorbing joys and sorrows of the artist, and the hour of reckoning was not far away. After he had puffed at his cigarette for a few minutes he stood up—the signal that it was near 11 o'clock and time for us to go."

STEAM ROLLER WORKING.

In a week crammed with business and interesting situations, the most spectacular event at the Legislature was the work of the steam roller in the Public Accounts Committee. William Proudfoot, Liberal Member for Centre Huron, during the investigation in the payment of $21,000 to the Taylor Scott Company in settlement of their claims against the Government in connection with the Central Prison labor contract, asked Mr. Taylor two pointed questions:—

1. Did you tell Sir James Whitney that unless you secured a fiat to sue in connection with your claim you would expose a member of the Cabinet?

2. Did you also make a contribution to the Government or any member of the Government for political purposes during the life of the contract?

These questions Mr. Taylor refused to answer. The Chairman of the Committee ruled that he need not answer them and was sustained by the Conservative majority after a heated debate.

It was then that the roller really began to roll. T. H. McGarry was the man who manipulated the lever. He took the absolutely unprecedented course of moving that the questions, answers, discussions and votes be stricken from the records of the Committee. This attempt to mutilate the record, although protested against with vehemence by the Liberal members, was forced through by the superior numbers on the Government side.

"This action simply means," declared Mr. J. C. Elliott, Liberal Member for West Middlesex, "that whenever a question embarrassing to the Government is asked, or embarrassing evidence given, it can be struck off the records. It is nothing but an outrage."

The principle involved was considered so important that the case was brought up on the floor of the House, and the Opposition's protest against what they considered not only tyranny, but a sordid disregard of the public interest in the matter, was registered emphatically. The Prime Minister promised consideration.

RURAL DEPOPULATION.

The important proposal to appoint a Commission or a select Committee of the Legislature to investigate rural conditions, especially the depopulation in country districts and the scarcity of farm labor was voted down by the Government. Col. Mayberry, Liberal Member for South Oxford, in moving the resolution for an investigation, pointed out that conditions in the country were far from being what they should be, and that it was the duty of the Government, in the interests of the farmers of the Province, to give the question the closest scrutiny. In spite of the arguments massed in support of his proposal he was unable to persuade the Government to take action.

CHINESE MEDICINE.

Introduction of Western Knowledge
Destined to Work Revolution.

The introduction into China of western knowledge is destined to work a complete revolution in medical and surgical practice in the Flowery Kingdom. One of the things that is going and now nearly gone is what is called "acupuncture" or pricking with needles. This mode of treating disease consists in sticking long needles of silver or gold into the body of members of the sufferer and then pulling them out, as housewives sometimes test their cakes with a broom straw to see if they are done.

Reliable authorities tell of many cases in which this heroic system has brought about cures. Perhaps the patient was seared into being cured,
and decided to get well rather than be stuck any more. It is declared that the Chinese doctors are able actually to penetrate the heart and other vital organs with their needles without causing death, and that the process does not cause any considerable amount of pain.

A large amount of hocus-pocus and superstition is mixed up with Chinese medicine. Some of the Chinese remedies are undoubtedly of value, but in most cases they are employed without much reference to their actual medicinal effect. For example, ginseng is widely used, but the roots that are most highly prized and that are supposed to be the most efficacious are those that happen to grow with two prongs to the roots so as to resemble more or less the human form. The meat of black dogs is supposed to be good for consumptives,
and even in Canton the traveler often sees blackdog carcasses still for sale.
Orange peel is believed to be a very fine medicine; the peels have such a market value, in fact, that oranges are commonly sold with the peel taken off.

The Mongolian physician, after feeling one pulse, then the other, perhaps both together, possibly may decide that a little dried grasshopper is the proper medicine to be used. On the other hand, if the Celestial of the native school supposes, by the action of the pulse, that the diseased condition requires some other form of treatment, the Chinese drug store near at hand possesses almost everything under the sun as a prescription.

Often times the debilitated patient is said to need a particularly rare and unusual medicine, as for example, some preparation consisting of the pulverized dry bones of a tiger; treatment is considered very commonplace
when the native physician prescribes
only such ordinary things as dried leaves, roots, stems, dried flowers,
the bark of trees, etc.

The Chinese doctor possesses many ideas peculiarly his own. There is much mystery and impressiveness in his manner of treatment. According to Mongolian medicine the Chinamen believe that the human heart is more likely to become inflamed at noon
during the summer season than at any other time. Likewise they regard the human ear as suggesting the condition of the kidneys, while the mouth and lips indicate the condition of the spleen and the stomach.

"Doctor John" Chinaman has evolved a wonderful system of diagnosis that depends on 24 main varieties of pulse, but entirely aside from these there are 27 other special and minor varieties that prognosticate death.

Cooking Fish Out of Doors.

"Clean the fish, but do not scale leave head, tail and fins intact and put a small strip of bacon in each of them.
Dig a hole large enough for the fish to lie in with several inches to spare.
Build a fire in it and get a good hot bed of coals. Rake out half of them, cover the remainder with an inch of grass, place the fish on the grass, cover with more grass and pile the rest of the hot coals on top. Cover the hole with a frying pan or any other handy
thing, as, for instance, a flat stone.

"In thirty minutes they will be cooked, and Delmonico himself could not make them taste better. They are partly fried and partly steamed by the juices of the grass. The bacon fat has friend out and permeated the flesh. The grass juice adds a peculiar and exceedingly pleasant flavor, and when taken from the hole the grass which clings to the fish can be easily pulled off, and all the scales and skin will come with it."—Edward G. W.
Ferguson in Outing Magazine.

Fairies—Good and Bad.

Deep down in their hearts, if the truth were told, the majority of grown-ups have a strong regard for fairy stories, and there are few of us with so little imagination that we have not a liking for these light, fantastic tales.
Just as there are all sorts and conditions of men, so are fairies diverse as a class. The banshee is an Irish fairy, and Scotland calls it a brownie. An elf is a fairy of diminutive size, supposed to be fond of practical jokes.
Genii are eastern spirits, sometimes good, but occasionally bad. A gnome is a guardian of a coal mine or quarry and a goblin a phantom spirit. Imp is the Welsh spirit of mischief and Jacko'-lantern a bog or marsh fairy who loves to mislead. Every one knows the mermaid as the sea spirit, and naiads are water nymphs. Oberon was king of the fairies, and a pixie is a fairy of Devon. Puck, full of fun, is Swedish, and a sylph is a spirit of the air.

Free Sport.

An angler was fishing contentedly
in a stream near an insane asylum
when one of the inmates appeared upon the scene. Sport had been poor, and the sportsman was overjoyed
when at last he landed a beauty. He was gazing with pride at his catch
when the visitor asked:

"Do you sell them fish, mister?"
"Sell 'em?" responded the angler.
"No fear. I'm a sportsman, not a fishmonger. I fish for the sport of catching 'em."

"Oh, you do, eh?" remarked the visitor as he kicked the capture back into the water. "Well, now you can have some more sport catching that one again."—London Answers.

How To Use Bits of Soap.

The toilet soap ends of a household
may be satisfactorily utilized if cut into thin shavings and dissolved in a small amount of warm water. Add to this soapy mixture three tablespoonfuls of eau de cologne and one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Then pour the mixture into any small moulds,
such as the tops of baking powder tins. The liquid will harden into small, flat cakes.

The Dead Watch Ticked.

A strong box containing family records and bedrooms was opened a few days ago to examine an old manuscript. The box had not been disturbed for several years, and the women who had taken it into a private room were surprised when they removed an old fashioned open face watch from its resting place to hear it tick loudly.
This to them was evidence that the box had been tampered with. But everything was found intact and in keeping with the memorandum of contents, and they were much perplexed because of the ticking watch, which ceased its activity before the box was returned to its place. A watchmaker who was consulted said that such "momentary life"
in "dead" timepieces when disturbed
was not unusual.—New York Tribune.

Where He Shone.

The prisoner was charged with larceny, and a lawyer of dubious reputation was defending him.

"I submit, gentlemen of the jury," shouted the lawyer, "that the facts disclosed do not constitute larceny, although I will concede that the district attorney is usually a better judge of stealing than am I!"

"But a less successful practitioner,"
was the disconcerting reply.—Judge.

Clear Proof.

"You may talk as you please about
the intelligence of animals, but dogs cannot reason."

"Of course they can't. If they could reason like human beings dogs wouldn't stick so to a man when he's down."— Baltimore American.

Shoeing Horses.

The art of shoeing horses to protect their hoofs against the evils of hard usage was unknown to the Greeks and Romans and is first mentioned in the history of the Celts as late as the fifth century.

There is not any virtue the exercise

Howard, in his work on climate, has fully established this fact by a comparison of a long series of observations made at Plaistow, Stratford and Tottenham Green, all within five miles of London, with those made at the apartments of the Royal society in London and periodically recorded in "Philosophical Transactions." In explanation Mr. Howard refers to the heat induced by the populations (just as the temperature of a hive of bees) and from the domestic fires and from the foundries, breweries, steam engines and other manufactories.—John Timb's
"Curiosities of London."

Exterminating Our Wild Life.

The forces that are actively seeking to destroy all our best wild life are overwhelmingly numerous and very aggressive. Unfortunately each one of these forces of destruction is steadily becoming more deadly. I assert, without fear of contradiction, that today every valuable wild species in our country is being killed faster than it is breeding. In our own times the great auk, passenger pigeon, Labrador duck, Eskimo curlew, Carolina parra-keet, flamingo (in the United States), Pallao's cormorant and the whooping crane have been completely exterminated. There are at least fourteen more species of birds that will be rendered extinct in the near future unless a revolution in public sentiment quickly and sternly stops the universal slaughter.—William T. Hornaday in Leslie's.

Noise in a Bank.

Banks were breaking in New York
eight a day at the height of the 1907
panic, and it was a nerve racking time.
A new president had taken charge of one shaky institution to try to save it.
He was a good natured man, but had a voice like the bellow of an angry bull.
Unfamiliar with banking details, he was nosing around the place.

"Well, how much a day do you steal?"
he bellowed at a clerk who was emptying bags filled with gold and silver into a sorting and counting machine.

The clerk turned red, then white and stammered out some unintelligible reply.

The new president went back to his office, thought hard for ten minutes and then sent for the clerk. He confessed to a shortage of $7,500.—New York Mail.

Meanwhile matters at Irvington were dragging along unsatisfactorily. The last rehearsal of the play had resulted in a spirited quarrel between Miss Imogene and her dismal fiancé. Mr. Van der Awe was a champion of realism, even on the stage. He considered it the height of absurdity for a passionate lover to imprint kisses upon his adored one's theatrical wig near the region of her left ear.

"But, good gracious me," stormed the indignant bird, with a dangerous snap in her big blue eyes, "don't you have enough realism when we are alone? If you think I'm going to let you kiss me before all those people you are very much mistaken. Now, one more word and we'll leave out that part altogether, sir! No, don't speak to me! Don't come near me! I think you are perfectly hateful and ridiculous. How I was ever weak-minded enough to engage myself to you at all is more than I can understand. So don't tempt me!"

The argument had become somewhat one-sided, so the dismal one retreated from the field of action, crestfallen, but unconvinced on matters pertaining to realism. He was a practical young man, however, and decided to kiss the wig in the region of its wearer's left ear for the present. Later—ah!

Richard had made several desperate attempts at a tête-à-tête with Miss Harriet, but found her nervous, distrustful and unsympathetic to his advances. She acted as though some shadow of impending trouble lay upon her mind, so the Texan gave up in despair, took a short lesson in British etiquette from the much subdued Bills and then went for a solitary horseback ride.

His deception could not be kept up much longer, for troubles were gathering above him like Longfellow's soaring vultures, and he fancied he knew one sick and wounded bison that would shortly be pecked to pieces, hoof and hide. And yet, no matter what happened, he would brazen it out to the bitter end. If he could only win the girl before the inevitable crash, then nothing else would matter—nothing!

Shortly after dinner the final preparations were made for the evening's entertainment. A tiny stage had been constructed at one end of the double drawing room and was provided with handsome plush curtains designed to slide upon a wire—when they worked properly, which was infrequent—which when opened revealed a dainty interior scene. The drawing room was arranged with chairs to accommodate the guests, who began to arrive shortly after dinner, and Restmore soon became a sparkle of lights and laughter. A gong announced the opening of the theater doors and the audience crowd-sheltered from the light by thick wisteria vines. He had lighted a cigar and was dreaming, as he smoked, of how beautiful she was, when suddenly he caught the swishing sound of skirts, and she took a wicker rocker by his side.

Richard was not a connoisseur as regards tobacco, and he wondered idly if the real Lord Croyland's favorite brand was up to the standard of this doubtful compliment. Miss Harriet continued:

"I'm glad I found you alone, for I want to thank you for these." She held her sheaf of roses toward him. "It was dear of you to send them, and it pleased me more than I can say."

"Nonsense," he laughed. "No flower that ever grew is worthy of you. That sounds foolish, I suppose, for many people must have said the same before, but I mean it simply, honestly."

"Thank you," she said softly, and both for a time were silent.

"Miss Harriet," he ventured presently, "you are beautiful tonight." He checked her pleased laugh and continued earnestly, "I don't mean that you are not beautiful always, but I have never seen you in black before, and"—

"How absurd!" she smiled. "I shall soon begin to think you like all the rest, a flatterer—just a flatterer!"

"No, no," he protested warmly; "it is more than that, believe me. I want to carry away with me forever the memory of you as you looked tonight. I must leave soon. I'm going home."

"Back to England?" she asked, a tremor in her voice.

"No, to Texas."

"What?"

Richard caught himself just in time. "Well—er—well, you see," he stammered, "you have turned me into such a good American that I think of your country now as being quite my own. I'll live down there for nearly a year, you know, and now—now business calls me back again."

Once more they were silent for a little space.

"And are you not coming north again?" she asked him nervously.

"It depends," said Richard the Brazen, smiling into the wisteria vine. "Listen, Miss Harriet. I want to ask you something. No, it isn't a question. It is only a flower. I would like to take just one of those roses to a cowboy down in Texas. I will find him if I can, and I know it will make him happier than anything else in all the world. May I have the rose?"

His tone was sad and low, but Harriet's tone was lower still when she answered haltingly:

ing without consulting his master, perhaps his nightly prayers might not have been put forth in such a spirit of pharisaic complacency.

Therefore for an hour in the Renwyck home reigned heavy silence, which was broken only by the ticking of the great antique clock in the hall or its soft melodious chime as it struck the quarter hours. Outside a night wind sang faintly as it tossed a scudding rack of clouds across the moonlit sky and the ancient elms of Restmore swayed and nodded to its soft caress.

When Richard reached his room he found himself in no mood for sleep. He laid aside his dress coat, donned a house jacket, extinguished his lights and seated himself in the Morris chair before an open window. His thoughts were in a whirl. Tomorrow, which promised to be a busy day for him—just how busy even he fortunately did not realize—would find him disgraced or blessed, according to the manner in which Miss Harriet would accept his confession. That she had already begun to suspect his real identity he was morally sure, and no time must be lost in revealing it himself before her doubt was changed to a certainty. In the morning he would make a clean breast of everything to her—the deception and its righteous cause—his love, which had stooped to subterfuge to win her heart, in despair of other means and under the stress of sudden suggestion. Then he would hasten back to the St. Regis, where he knew his dad would seek for him, tell him the whole truth and run the gantlet of parental ire. After that a third confession must follow—to Jacob Renwyck. This, he felt, would be harder than the other two, for, since the episode of the foreign draft, the manner of his host, while still polite, had undergone a decided change. A certain coolness, not to say a certain suspicion, had been engendered in the mind of the financier. It was unnoticed by the balance of the household, yet to Richard far more perturbing than an open, honest avowal of dislike.

The deep water harbor speculation, too, ran through his tangled thoughts, but the final crash he was powerless to avert. It was probably too late now, anyway. It hung above him like some with chairs to accommodate the guests, who began to arrive shortly after dinner, and Restmore soon became a sparkle of lights and laughter. A gong announced the opening of the theater doors, and the audience crowded in, took their seats and waited with a flutter of excitement.

Mrs. Renwyck had agreed to speak the prologue, but at the last moment her courage forsook her, and she vowed she would sink through the floor if forced to face her guests. Arguments and encouragements were alike in vain, so Richard was prevailed upon to take her place, which he did, scrambling through somehow, assisted by a British drawl and his ever faithful monocle. To judge by a flattering chorus of feminine approval, he made the hit of the evening, though in describing his stage fright afterward he used a most un-English simile.

"Pon my word," he confessed, "I felt as if I had swallowed a live jack rabbit that was trying to bolt eleven ways at once. Fancy!"

The play went off without a hitch, except for one trifling incident which came near spoiling it altogether. The dismal Mr. Van der Awe, true to his principles on realism, forgot about the wig and committed the indiscretion of kissing the bird plump upon her tempting lips, whereupon the ruffled ingenue gave him a most realistic box on the ears, forgot her lines and started in on an impromptu but spontaneous denunciation. This, in a measure, made Miss Renwyck's subsequent part fall flat, but no one in the audience seemed to know the difference, while both the man and bird agreed afterward that it improved the play.

If Miss Renwyck failed to be impressive in the great denunciation scene, the same could not be said of her personal appearance. She was dressed in an evening gown of soft, dull black, which brought out the snowy whiteness of her throat and arms. In her thick dark tresses a great tiara glowed and sparkled, rivaling, it seemed, the riviere of splendid gems about her neck, while at her breast blazed a mammoth brooch. Fashioned in the form of an eagle with outstretched wings, a shimmering blaze of light, the proud bird stood as an emblem of its country's wealth and daring, perched on the bosom of a princess of the free.

To Richard, in his present state of mind, Harriet seemed the most radiantly perfect creature yet produced since the world began. As she bowed behind the footlights for the second time to an enthusiastic encore a large bouquet of American Beauties was tossed upon the stage, and Miss Harriet blushed as she stooped for this most apposite tribute to her own charms. When safely behind the curtains she glanced at a card attached, which bore two words, "An American." This signature was vague, yet somehow Miss Renwyck picked the donor out from myriads of gentlemen who might better have claimed the title, and again she blushed as she buried her face among the fragrant buds.

"How splendid of him!" she whispered to her roses. "If only he had been my cowboy perhaps—perhaps!"

But the rest was a secret which the roses never told.

One by one the guests departed, but not till the last of them was driven away on the gravel road did Richard find an opportunity for a word alone with his ladylove. He was seated in a darkened nook on the front veranda,

If I can, and I know it will make me happier than anything else in all the world. May I have the rose?"

His tone was sad and low, but Harriet's tone was lower still when she answered haltingly:

"No; you need not take it to my hero of the plains. No doubt he has forgotten me—if he ever thought of me—as I shall cease to think of him. What should a cowboy do with a flower? And yet—I will not be ungenerous. To me you have given all these. Take one and keep it for yourself."

With a trembling hand she laid a rose upon his lap, but Richard forgot the flower and caught the hand.

"You mean," he whispered eagerly, "that I might one day take his place; that I?"

"No, no," she protested, striving for release; "I—I gave a flower, no more!"

"No more!" he echoed. "Only that when I ask for—al?"

"Don't, please," she faltered.

"I must speak! I will!" he cried, swept away by the hour and the chance. "I had hoped to teach you to love me for myself—to realize that we do not belong to different lands and climes—for I am not!"

"Harriet!"

Mr. Renwyck was calling from the doorway, and Richard swore bitterly beneath his breath. It was outrageous to be interrupted just then!

"Oh, there you are!" laughed the financier. "Do you know, my dear, your tiara shines out in the darkness like a constellation on a moonless night? Come; it's time for little actresses to be in bed."

The Texan was given no more chances with Miss Harriet, for the rest of the ladies now came out, and his final good night was spoken only by a pressure of the hand, but a pressure which left him happy, for the girl did not fail to return it with something more than mere courtesy.

Richard watched in silence while she took the jewels from her hair and throat and breast and handed them to her father, and somehow she seemed more beautiful still when unadorned, for to him she was a gem more precious than her weight in glittering diamonds. With a heart more buoyant than his steps he bounded up the stairs, for tomorrow would decide his fate. Tomorrow! She had given a rose—no more—but she had not refused when he asked for all. Tomorrow!

CHAPTER XVII.

MR. JACOB RENWYCK, dismissing the new butler who had waited for his master, after having assured himself that all the other inmates of the house had retired for the night, carefully placed the family diamonds in his private safe, which stood in a corner of the library, set the burglar alarm and went into his room. For years he had attended in person to the closing of the house, except upon rare occasions when business called him from the city, at which times he left elaborate instructions with the trusted and time tried major domo, whose position on account of illness was being temporarily filled by the new man. The alarm once set, not a door or a window could be opened without a clamorous uproar from a big brass gong in the upper hall, and therefore Restmore might repose in peace and earn its name. Had Mr. Renwyck known, however, that one Woolsey Ellis had departed earlier in the even-hideous nightmare, the end of which he could only know when he awakened to a grimmer reality than he dreamed.

Meantime in another wing of Restmore two fair but frightened young women, who had exchanged their evening gowns for comfortable lounging robes, clung to one another, whispering in the dark. As the hands of a tiny bedroom clock slowly crept around toward the hour of 3 they began to realize the rashness of their undertaking. Miss Harriet, the more courageous of the two, was less inclined than ever to meet this unknown man and but for her promise to her younger friend would have declined point blank to take the risk.

"Imogene," she murmured earnestly,

"It is not too late to change our plans. We still have ten minutes left. Why not let me call father and tell him everything? He and Lord Croyland and Mr. Van der Awe could meet the man, overpower him and get your letters back, and nothing would ever come of it."

At this sensible suggestion Miss Imogene again exhibited symptoms of hysteria.

"Oh, Harriet, darling, please," she quavered, "you've promised me! And you can't refuse when it's nearly time. I'm not going to faint or scream or anything like that. I'll be just as brave as a—a—lion—no, not a lion, maybe, but some other kind of animal that isn't so terribly afraid. You needn't be scared. I'll take care of you, Hattie, dear. Now, do be sensible. Isn't it time to go?"

Miss Harriet looked at the timepiece, nodded, sighed and took the other's hand. They opened the bedroom door, peeped out and listened. Nothing could be heard but the ticking of the hall clock, the sound of the wind outside and a mellow snore that oozed from Mr. Renwyck's room across the hall.

"I—I wish he'd stop it," whispered Imogene; "it makes one's hair rise up. Don't let go my hand, darling—please."

"Hush," breathed Harriet and led the way along the silent upper hall.

Slowly the two gentle conspirators tipped down the gloomy stairs, starting at a cracking step beneath their feet, fearful of dangers unknown, but menacing, that seemed to lurk at every turn. In safety they reached the lower hall at last, paused, then drew aside the heavy portieres which masked the entrance to the library.

If the hall outside was gloomy, the room which they entered was darker still. By a sickly light which filtered through the draperies of the window opposite they could see the shadowy outlines of the desk, the top of a silver inkstand and a ghostly high backed chair, while in an angle of the wall they descried the metal disk of the combination lock on Mr. Renwyck's safe.

They waited in silence till the clock in the hall behind them boomed out the hour of 3 in solemn, measured cadence, and as the last echo died away they heard a cautious tapping on the window pane.

"Oh, Lord, it's him!" gasped Imo-again. "Then we needn't wait there. If you have the keys spoke of!"

"Wait a minute," the man cried. "We can't talk in here, near the front of the stairs, as I want to run any unnecessary risk either for you ladies or for what room does that door lead to?" He pointed to the left, where Harriet, following his shadowy lead, wondered if he were up to so trick.

"Mr. Fitzgeorge," she said, "I prefer to transact this matter alone. I see no reason!"

Again the man interrupted. "All right," he answered. "It isn't my risk, you know. My father came down those stairs and I don't want to injure him, but—"

"Oh, Harriet, please!" a shrinking voice at her elbow, Harriet, seeing the wisdom of giving in.

"That is the billiard room, answered, "but it also connects with the hall. Stand where you are, you hear me call you may find me. Come, Imogene."

This room was lighter than the library, having a large transom window through which the sickly light forced its way, and possessed the additional advantage to the girl that the son of the billiard table, who was kept between them and the door.

At Miss Renwyck's low call flashed his lantern twice across the library window and stepped into the billiard room, carefully closing the door behind him.

"Now," he began immediately, "I have a packet from his pocket get down to business. But take the money which Miss Croyland is kindly going to lend me for a month or two I want to make a plan of my act."

"Sir," whispered Harriet, "consider that at all necessary explained yourself in your letter. Neither Miss Chittendon nor I go further into your motives, but be good enough to bring your ordinary business to an end."

"But, my dear Miss Renwyck, visitor persisted, lowering his voice to match her own, "you must know that something is due me. I am myself in a very bad light before you, and I want to clear it up before I go. Appearances at me, I know, but—"

"What's that?" demanded Harriet, sharply starting at a slight noise at first she fancied was in the air.

"Nothing, I think," Mr. Fitzgeorge answered hurriedly after his instant. "Ah, this is it!" on, swiftly stooping and picking up something from the floor. "I stepped on a stray piece of chalk. As I was saying just got to leave for the west to join my regiment"—they his mocking smile even if they did not see it—"and, to be absolutely sure, which I prefer, some friends, the police, are on the night. I hope I haven't frightened you, and I beg to assure you wouldn't harm a hair of your heads for any price whatever. I signed this extraordinarily rascal."

"Yes, you," said Harriet in ting grammar and all else, but her human terror in the while she clung to Harriet's hook from head to heel. "Oh, Harriet, darling, take me, I want to scream," her friend admonished. "Stand above a whisper now, me. There; I'm not afraid." Renwyck, having once keyed to the point of meeting a the dark, was not a woman at the crucial moment. A she was settling upon her, her heart beat faster than at, she was now in possession of every faculty and could anger without a tremor of hand. "the purse," she whispered. "Stand where you are, I can't see a single word. Really, it isn't much danger, after member," she smiled, "you used to be a little lion, and only 'Roddy-poddykins.'" Harriet afterward at this flash yet it chanced to be the case, for the terrified Miss as crouched in the library trying at once to be the best and to keep her teeth ring. In both efforts, alas, Renwyck crossed the room, fumbling for the electric switch, and off the burglar alarm. It did not make a light, lest it be any one came into the upper breathing an inward prayer, watched the window, raised and stepped backward to a stage beside the desk. He saw nothing, but present himself enveloped for an instant of light from a small lantern and heard a low exclamation of surprise from the dark. Harriet rose to the emergency, "she began in a soft tone, 'I am Miss Renwyck, Miss Chittendon and there is no one here.'" She gave a moment's silence for a moment. "Give me your word on that the voice."

"honor."

"Are you did the man; "you can see me, Miss Renwyck," and she climbed cautiously into and his bullseye carefully and inspected the hall out of red satisfied and slipped into his pocket. "The visitor as he caught Miss Imogene's bloodless face. "Go back on me, my dear. I think you would, and I am glad to you."

"aid Harriet. "You must be in transaction with me. This Mr.—Fitzgeorge?"

"altered the shivering young man—'It's he.'"

"Miss Renwyck began when we needn't waste further. If you have the letters you minute," the man interrupted. "I can't talk in here. It's too late of the stairs, and I don't

"we know all that. Give me the letters and go."

"Pardon me," said the specious Mr. Roderick Fitzgeorge, with a gallant bow, "but I haven't quite finished yet. I want you to understand my position clearly, so that you may know I'm dealing squarely, though a harsh world outside is dogging my innocent heels."

The much abused gentleman plunged into a rambling tale of his misfortunes, speaking so rapidly that neither of his auditors at times could follow him even if they had not been in a state bordering on collapse, although Harriet, the cooler of the two, wondered why the villain did not take the money and go.

Had a watcher been concealed in the library he might well have understood the motives of Mr. Roderick Fitzgeorge, or Mr. Jack Bibbs, for both names, among many others, chanced to appertain to the same attractive gentleman. No sooner had the door of the billiard room been closed when another form rose stealthily above the library window sill, stepped noiselessly inside, crossed the room and dropped on his knees before Mr. Renwyck's safe. The man was of medium height and slender build, wearing a mask over the upper portion of his face. But his chin and jaw appeared beneath the band of black, showing a pale, putty-like complexion.

In his work upon the safe this second nocturnal visitor did not resort to force or violence. He was far too old a hand to use such primitive means, nor did he wish to arouse the household by any sudden noise. He pressed a practiced ear against the iron safe door, then turned the dial slowly with a feather touch till at last he was rewarded by a faint metallic click as the delicate tumbler dropped into its slot. By the aid of his electric flash lamp he made a mental note of the number, indicating his starting point. Then he replaced his ear and reversed the dial as carefully as before. Again he heard the warning click.

"Left to sixty, right to thirty-five," he murmured to himself and bent to his work once more.

He tried four numbers, that being the usual combination of smaller safes, then confidently turned the dial to the right. He scored a blank. The work must now be done again, though not from the beginning, for three at least of the numbers were known to him. Twice more he tried and failed both times, but at the third attempt the dial locked and the outer door swung open when the nickel plated handle was softly turned.

The rest was simple. The burglar produced a bunch of skeleton keys and in less than two minutes had forced the lock of the inner door, which opened with a rasp of protest to the pilferer.

The man with the putty-like complexion overhauled the contents of the safe by the aid of his flash lamp, selected such valuables as seemed to be the least bulky, but most important, and stowed them in several capacious pockets. This done, he carefully closed and locked the inner doors of the rifled safe, pressed upon the outer door, adjusted the nickel handle in its proper place and spun the dial of the combination lock.

billiard table, while that of a man was on the other side, with his back toward the library door, but with his face half turned toward the spot where the Texan waited.

"Very well," whispered the man again. "I guess you are playing fair, all right." He took a package from his inner pocket. "Here are your letters. Have you got the money?"

"Yes," said Harriet softly; "I have. But wait. I must see that the letters are all here. Imogene, look over them as quickly as you can. I am afraid to turn on the light, but perhaps Mr. Fitzgeorge will be kind enough to lend us his lantern."

"Well, say," chuckled the visitor quietly, "you've got your nerve with you, all right! I'm sorry I didn't meet you before." Again he laughed noiselessly, produced his bullseye and threw a blaze of light on the pile of letters which he laid upon the table. "Look 'em over, Imogene, my dear," he continued, with unblushing familiarity. "That's every one you ever wrote me."

With a thrill of pleasure the Texan caught this last remark. The letters, then, were not Harriet's, after all, and she, brave girl, had dared to face this scoundrel in order to shield a friend. He could wing the fellow as he stood. But no. That would alarm the house and undo everything which this splendid woman had striven to hide. He could wait, and if the fellow offered no affront he would let him go rather than mortify Miss Renwyck by his own appearance on the scene. When the man was safely gone the Texan could then slip quietly to his room, and these two courageous girls would never know that a sentinel had stood guard outside the door.

Miss Imogene opened each letter to make certain that it was there, counted the pile and looked up timidly.

"They—they are not all here," she faltered. "I—I wrote fourteen, and here are only twelve."

"That's all I got," said the burglar shortly. "You never wrote but twelve."

"But I did," protested the trembling Imogene. "You know I did, Rod—er—I mean Mr. Fitzgeorge. Oh, Harriet, won't you make him give me the other two?"

"Yes, I will," said Harriet firmly.

"Mr. Fitzgeorge, we have acted in good faith toward you and expect at least a fair return. You demanded $100. I have the money here in my hand, but I tell you once for all that I shall not pay you unless you surrender all the letters to this child."

"I haven't got any more," the burglar answered sullenly. "And, what's more, I"—He paused at the sound of a cat call from without and began fumbling in his pockets. "Why, here you are!" he exclaimed in well feigned astonishment, producing the missing letters. "I didn't know I had 'em, I swear I didn't. Take 'em, my dear. Pay up and we'll call it quits."

"And—and you won't publish the copies?" quavered Miss Imogene as though terrified at the sound of her own whispers.

"No," said the man; "I give you my word as a gentleman," with a singular misapprehension of the meaning of the term. "Hurry with the dough. It's getting late."

Assured that the letters completed Miss Imogene's indiscreet list, Miss Harriet tossed a roll of bills in the circle of light which was made by the

a catlike tread. He had taken perhaps six steps, and his back was now turned toward the door which led into the hall. Suddenly he felt a savage grip about his neck and found himself with outflung arms, his mouth and nose smashed flat against the table, while a tiny ring of cold steel was pushed behind his ear.

"Steady, you hound, or I'll give you a shot that you never saw in billiards!"

The tone was low, but masterful, and Mr. Jack Bibbs was far too prudent a gentleman to jeopard his health by futile disobedience. Therefore he made no immediate attempt to move.

On Harriet's brain, even in that dreadful instant, flashed a vivid, insistent memory. Again she was perched on the quivering broncho's back, pressed onward in a reeling, dizzy pool of death, while in her ears rang words of sweet encouragement. And as then she had exercised her force of will, so now she saved herself once more by clapping her hand over the mouth of fair Imogene. This time it was muscle combined with common sense, and a healthy shriek was throttled in its infancy.

Richard released his grip on the nape of his prisoner's neck.

"Stand up!" he ordered, and the man obeyed. "Hands up too! Ah, thank you! Perhaps you also have a gun. Allow me to relieve you of its weight." He ran his free hand over the person of Mr. Fitzgeorge and secured a short, ugly looking pistol and a pair of brass knuckles, both of which he promptly pocketed. "Good!" he chuckled. "And now, Miss Renwyck, will you please be good enough to throw some light upon this gentleman?"

"Yes," whispered Harriet; "I think I can explain it—"

"No, no!" the Texan interrupted. "I don't mean words. I refer to the bullseye lamp. Just turn it on him, please, and we'll look him over."

For a moment the burglar listened to the low murmur of his confederate's voice in the adjoining room, smiled sardonically and slipped stealthily through the open window. Outside he crept to a point beneath the window of the billiard room, cried out in imita- tion of a vagrant cat, then, crouching, fled in the direction of the river, with the cases of the famous Renwyck di- amonds tapping deliciously against his ribs.

CHAPTER XVIII.

U PSTAIRS the music of Mr. Renwyck's sonorous slumbers still oozed through the chinks of his bedroom door, while at the farther end of the hall another closed on the sleepless Mr. Richard Williams.

The young man had heard the clock strike 3 and was still pursuing his train of tangled thought when it oc- curred to him that perhaps if he read for half an hour his mind might be- come composed enough for sleep. He remembered a partly finished book which he had left in the billiard room and started downstairs to get it. With a natural disinclination to disturb the household, he tipped very cautiously through the hall, down the flight of carpeted steps and approached the billiard room, which, like the library, was separated from the lower hall by heavy curtains. These he was about to draw aside when his outstretched hand was suddenly arrested by the sound of a voice within. It was mas- culine and belonged to no inmate of the house that he could recognize; also it was subdued, as one who feared to be overheard. What he heard assured him that some rascality was afoot.

"It's money I'm in need of," the voice was saying, "and that's why I took the risk of coming here alone in the middle of the night."

Richard's hand slid instinctively to his hip before he remembered the ab- surdity of fashionable clothes. Clearly there was some one in the room who had no business there. Yet to whom was he talking? If a member of the household, why this secrecy? He must investigate, of course. But first he had better arm himself, as he did not know who or how many he might have to deal with.

His mind once made up, the Texan removed his slippers, crept softly up the stairs to his room, then down again, pausing once more outside the billiard room, but this time listening deliberately.

"Mr. Fitzgeorge," a woman's voice was saying, "my patience is exhaust- ed. Why all this talk? Your scheme is blackmail—nothing else. Give me the letters, take your pay and go."

With a stab of pain the Texan recog- nized the voice as Miss Renwyck's, and it came with a double pang at the thought that she was meeting some unknown rascal in the dead of night—that she was buying letters from him.

"What letters?" his heart questioned jealously. He longed to rush in and kill the miscreant in his tracks, yet wisdom held his mad design in abey- ance for the present. He peeped through the heavy portieres and spied two female figures on one side of the term. "Hurry to the dough, it's getting late."

Assured that the letters completed Miss Imogene's indiscreet list, Miss Harriet tossed a roll of bills in the circle of light which was made by the bullseye lantern.

"You would better go now," she said in a tone of disgust which she made no attempt to disguise. "I will close the window after you."

The man counted the money hurried- ly, slipped it into his vest pocket and closed the slide of the lantern.

"Thank you," he murmured, with a most elaborate bow. "I'm much oblig- ed to both of you. Rich people like you won't ever miss a little sum like this, and it will make me remember you for many a day, even without the recollection of your pretty faces. You've been square by me, and I'll be square by you. And now one kiss all around, and we'll say good night."

"You scoundrel!" breathed Harriet, furious to her finger tips. "Go in- stantly or I will call for help."

"Oh, no, you won't, my beauty!" laughed the man. "I'll bet you've kissed uglier men than me before, and I'm going to take you down a peg. You holler once and I'll shoot the man that comes to help you."

Miss Renwyck, with the limp and whimpering Imogene clinging to her waist, moved slowly around the bil- liard table, while the burglar watched her, breathing hard and following with

"Yes," whispered Harriet; "I think I can explain in"—

Miss Harriet complied. The light re- vealed the countenance of Roderick Fitzgeorge, alias Jack Bibbs, alias twenty other names which have no bearing on this comedy. His clear cut but dissipated features were distorted and sullen in his rage against the wo- men whom he thought had laid a trap for him.

"My, what a prize package!" observ- ed the Texan softly. "You have a bad eye, my friend; but, after all, I'm rather glad to know you. Miss Ren- wyck, do you think you could find me a rope or a piece of good, strong twine?"

"Oh, what is he going to do?" Miss Imogene began to whimper. "Oh, please, Lord Croyland, won't you let him go? He's my friend. We let him in the library window, and if you tie him up everybody will know all about it. Oh, oh, oh!"

HOME COURSE IN SCIENTIFIC AGRICULTURE

SECOND ARTICLE — THE LIMING OF SOILS.

By H. J. WHEELER, Ph. D., Director and Chemist of the Rhode Island Agricultural Experiment Station.

THE recognition of the agricultural value of certain forms of lime is not new, and it appears from the writings of Pliny that liming was practiced by the Romans more than 2,000 years ago. In England, Germany, France and other European countries the application of lime in various forms has been and is still practiced extensively, but, as Roberts states, probably 99 per cent of the arable soil of the United States has never been limed, and indeed many large areas are not in need of it. "Authorities seem to agree that lime is necessary to the plant, and if it be wholly lacking in soils, even though an freshly slaked lime and of ground limestone upon light sandy soils, which are inclined to be dry and which contain only small amounts of organic matter. It hastens unduly the decomposition of organic matter and thus renders the soil more open and less retentive of fertilizers and moisture than before. If either ground burned lime or slaked lime must be used upon such soils it should be applied in small amounts at not too frequent intervals.

The arguments in favor of the use of lime are summarized thus:

The use of lime as a soil improver is very ancient, and its value for this purpose is generally recognized. Its action as a fertilizer is both direct and indirect.

There are many soils in which lime is deficient, notably such as are derived from granite, mica schist and certain sandstones, slates and shales. On such soils lime is often of direct value in supplying a necessary element of plant food.

Indirect Value of Lime.

The indirect value of lime is perhaps more important than its direct action, because probably the majority of cultivated soils contain sufficient lime to meet the direct demands of plants for food. Lime is of indirect value in unlocking the unavailable potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen in the soil.

Lime exerts a decided influence on the mechanical condition of soils, rendering heavy compact soils looser in texture and tending to bind particles of loose, leachy soils.

Lime is also beneficial in furnishing conditions in the soil favorable to the activity of the micro-organisms which convert the nitrogen of organic matter into nitrates which are readily assimilated by plants which decompose organic matter and which assist certain leguminous plants to assimilate the free nitrogen of the air.

One form of lime (gypsum) has been shown to be a most effective corrective of black alkali.

The continued use of lime unaccompanied by other fertilizers may prove injurious, especially on poor soils, since it converts the insoluble nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid compounds of the soil into such as can be rapidly taken up by plants or washed out in the drainage, thus hastening the exhaustion of the supply of these substances in the soil. As the German adage states, "The use of lime without manure makes both farm and farmer poor."

Behavior Toward Lime.

It has been shown that even upon many upland and naturally well drained soils, apparently in good condition otherwise, the sourness (acidity) is so great that most varieties of plants will not thrive. Lime is the most economical and effective substance thus far used for correcting this condition. According to experiments made by the Rhode Island agricultural experiment station on acid soils in that state, the plants tested may be classified with regard to their behavior toward lime as follows: Plants benefited by liming, spinach, lettuce (all kinds), beets (all kinds), okra (gumbo), salsify (vegetable oyster), celery, onion, parsnip, cauliflower, cucumber, eggplant, cantaloupe, asparagus, kohlrabi, cabbage, dandelion, Swedish turnip, pepper, peanut, English or flat turnip, upland cress, (bennegrass), martynia, ru-eral rule, it may be stated that from one-half to one and one-half tons of lime per acre every five or six years is sufficient. Applications of two or three tons may, however, be advisable in cases of very acid soils which are to be seeded down and are to remain in grass for several years. The practice of applying small amounts of lime at somewhat frequent intervals is being generally accepted as preferable to the use of large amounts at rare intervals.

Lime combined as carbonate, as in marl, wood ashes, etc., can usually be applied with safety in the spring or at any other season of the year, but autumn is always the safest time to apply caustic or slaked lime. It is gen-

WASTEFUL METHOD OF STORING MANURE.

Generally considered best to apply the lime to the soil immediately after plowing and harrow it in thoroughly. Lime which is already slaked may be spread upon the soil directly from wagons or carts or dumped into heaps and then spread with a shovel, although the most satisfactory plan in such cases is to use a lime spreader or ordinary grain drill with a fertilizer attachment. Where a lime spreader or similar implement is not available the burnt lime may be placed on the soil in piles of from forty to fifty pounds each, covered with moist earth and allowed to slake before being spread with a shovel.

In conclusion, it may be said, ascertain first whether lime is needed. If it is, apply it judiciously, and never depend upon lime alone to maintain the fertility of the soil, for all of the ingredients which plants need must be present in the soil to insure the profitable production of crops.

WOMEN OF DENMARK.

Is a Rule, They Are Wage Earners Even Though Married.

There is an outstanding point of difference between the activities of women in Denmark and in other countries. In Denmark the sole aim is economic independence for women throughout their lives.

Thus in Copenhagen more than 1,000 married women work as clerks in offices. By far the majority of actresses are married. In order to enter the school of the corps de ballet it is necessary to be of good family. The greater part of the husbands of ballet dancers are in high positions.

Three hundred and fifty to four hundred of the teachers in the free schools in Copenhagen are married. They re-

What is it, a desire for woman's vanity, that accounts for the increasing popularity of the footstool? Certainly we are a comfortable people. Formality and stiffness. Certainly, too, the dainty womanhood seeks a means self, and where can this be accomplished as on one of these stools, which are in themselves of art? At all events, the necessities of our grandmothers apparently come back to us.

abundance of all the other essential elements is present, the plant cannot develop normally. The plant cannot grow if any one of the essential elements of plant food is lacking. Fortunately, however, many soils are well provided with lime by nature, and it is seldom or never necessary for those who cultivate them to resort to liming.

lately, however, many soils are provided with lime by nature, and it is seldom or never necessary for those who cultivate them to resort to liming.

The method usually resorted to for ascertaining the amount of lime in soils is to treat them with some strong mineral acid (usually hydrochloric) and determine the amount of lime which is thus dissolved. Some writers state that if only one-half of 1 per cent is thus shown to be present immediate resort to liming is desirable; others set the amount higher, and some seem to prefer to have present as much as 1 per cent.

The fact that beets of all kinds make a ready response to liming on soils which are deficient in carbonate of lime may be utilized as the basis for a practical and reliable method of testing the lime requirements of the soil. For this purpose lay out two plats of land, each about 12 by 30 feet, manure each of the plats with like amounts of a fertilizer containing potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen and apply lime to one of the plats at the rate of from one to two and a half tons per acre (forty pounds per plat would be approximately two and a half tons per acre). A comparison of the growth and yields on the two plats will furnish a safe means of judging whether the soil will respond profitably to applications of lime.

Liming Sometimes Injurious.

Excessive amounts of lime, especially on light soils, may have an injurious action. This is particularly true of (all kinds), okra (gumbo), salsify (vegetable oyster), celery, onion, parsnip, cauliflower, cucumber, eggplant, cantaloupe, asparagus, kohlrabi, cabbage, dandelion, Swedish turnip, pepper, peanut, English or flat turnip, upland cress (peppergrass), martynia, rhubarb, common pea, pumpkin, summer squash (scalloped), golden wax bean, red Valentine bean, horticultural pole bean, bush lima bean, lentil, Hubbard squash, saltbush, hemp, tobacco, sorghum, alfalfa, clover (red, white, crimson and alsike), barley, emmer, wheat, oats, timothy, Kentucky blue grass, Canada pea, Cuthbert raspberry, gooseberry, currant (White Dutch), orange, quince, cherry and Burbank Japan plum; plants but little benefited by liming, Indian corn, spurry (it has been reported in England that spurry is injured by liming, but such results have not been obtained in Rhode Island), rye, carrot, chicory, Rhode Island bent and redtop; plants slightly injured by liming, cotton, tomato, cowpea (drummond), Concord grape, peach, apple and pear; plants distinctly injured by liming, lupine, common sorrel (Rumex acetosella), radish, velvet bean, castor bean, flax, blackberry, black cap raspberry and cranberry.

Frequency of Liming.

The frequency with which liming should be practiced depends, among other things, upon the character of the soil and the rate of application, the number of years involved in the rotation practiced, the plants grown and their order of succession. As a general rule, liming is necessary to be of good family. The greater part of the husbands of ballet dancers are in high positions.

Three hundred and fifty to four hundred of the teachers in the free schools in Copenhagen are married. They receive exactly the same salary as the men teachers—that is, $64 yearly. A head teacher, man or woman, commences with $160 and rises to $208. In the gymnasiums and secondary schools many of the professors are married women, who also form a considerable proportion of the privat-docenten in the universities. The municipal council of Copenhagen has several women members.

In brief, in Denmark it is the rule rather than the exception for the married woman to be economically independent through her own labors.—London Spectator.

WATCHING WATER FREEZE.

An Easy Way to Make the Growth of Ice Crystals Visible.

It is not commonly known that fresh water may sometimes be "colder than ice" and that the growth of ice crystals may be made plainly visible. An interesting experiment to show this may easily be made.

Fill a clean pint bottle with distilled water. Make a hole in the stopper large enough to let the thermometer pass through it. The kind of thermometer used in physical laboratories is most convenient. Insert the stopper in the bottle and let the thermometer reach nearly to the bottom.

Pack snow or ice and salt round the bottle as you would pack an ice cream freezer. If the bottle is not jarred the temperature may be seen to drop several degrees below the freezing point without freezing the water.

If the stopper and thermometer are now removed and a small piece of ice free from any trace of salt is inserted in the bottle and pushed down into the water crystals of ice may be seen to shoot out in all directions from it.

After this experiment has been tried you will have some understanding of the network of ice girders which is beneath the ice coating of small ponds.—London Telegraph.

Thackeray at the Minstrels.

When the Christy minstrels came to London in 1857 Thackeray was enchanted with them. "I heard not long since," he says in one of his letters, "a minstrel who performed a negro ballad that, I confess, moistened these spectacles in a most unexpected manner. I have gazed on thousands of tragedy queens dying on the stage and expiring in appropriate blank verse, and I never wanted to wipe them. They have looked up, he it said, at many scores of clergymen without being dimmed, and, behold, a vagabond, with a corked face and a banjo, sings a little song and strikes a wild note which sets the heart thrilling with happy pity." Gladstone, too, was an admirer of the Christy minstrels and was often to be seen listening to their songs with rapt attention.—London Chronicle.

PIN AND NEEDLE SHOWERS.

Girl Chums Give Bride Elect and Unique Shower.

It is not always easy to get something new for entertainment one girl recently originated and needle shower. The invitation, sent but three weeks in advance to only a dozen intimates were in handmaiden, unpasted and fastened with common pins. When asked to bring a gift of sewing equipment, the word was interpreted rather broadly.

There were many consultations that the gifts should not be too large. One brought a fair sized workbasket, another a dozen of silk in useful colors, a third pair of cutting shears, still embroidery scissors. There were several small bags for the work, a special bag for crocheting, a large laundry bag and a tiny bag fitted with two reels of needlebook, thimble and scissors so small that it went into the shopping bag or purse. BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so."

FOOTSTOOL FAD.

of This Comfortable Article of Household Furniture.

MODEL QUITE SIZABLE.

Patterns in Various Woods to Take the Lead in Popular Living Room Effects For Living Made With Caned Tops.

Is it, a desire for comfort or vanity, that accounts for the popularity of the footstool? We are a comfort loving people and stiffness repels us. We, too, the dainty footgear of the land seeks a means to show itself where can this be so well shed as on one of these footstools which are in themselves works of art. At all events, these luxurious pieces of our grandmothers have lately come back to stay.

present day footstools are not like doll-like articles which gave papers of pins in ribbon cases, blocks of colored and pearl beaded pins, dainty cushions stuck with pins in designs and, in short, every handy device that ingenuity could suggest for providing the necessary pin and needle.

This particular shower was the accompaniment to a luncheon, and the clever hostess had made a large simulated spool from cardboard, colored with water colors, for a centerpiece, and from its top rose a great sheaf of chrysanthemums. The place cards were also like spools, with bright little verses written on the back. You may be sure the bride had the old favorite:

Needles and pins, needles and pins,
When a man marries his trouble begins.

These twelve girls were a group that had been close friends since they were little girls, and, wishing to give the bride an engagement present really worth while, they clubbed together and got a lovely pearl "pin"—more properly brooch—and this was, of course, the center of the pin shower. When luncheon was finished the bride was asked to pull an end of thread that came from the large spool on the table. It opened mysteriously and disclosed the dainty packages within.

IN STENCIL EFFECT.

Design For Living Room Table Carried Out In Bulgarian Linen.

Here is a simple stencil pattern suitable for the ends of a table runner or bureau scarf. The material used for the background is ecru Bulgarian linen, and the leaves and the hem are of blue-green linen, while the flowers are rose color. When the flowers and the leaves are both tacked in place they are buttonholed round in their own colors, and the stems and lines are worked in a quiet shade of green in satin stitch. The rounds on the little triplets between the flowers are rings of buttonhole stitch worked in rose color. In working these little disks make every alternate stitch spring from a common hole in the center and every other a little shorter than its neighbor; this will prevent the middle from becoming overcrowded. The spotting above the green hem is in the same pink and is a succession of isolated chain stitches, says the Modern Priscilla.

The detail shows the method of working this stitch; the chain loop should not be pulled too tightly, but should be allowed to form a circle, as near as may be, the little catching down stitch should be as small and as inconspicuous as possible and the needle should be brought up again with the one action about one-eighth of an inch away ready for the next loop. The center of the applique flower has a dark brown satin stitch spot worked on

A Cool Reception In the Town of Ace High Is Turned to Well Paying Investment—The Washing Machine Man Vanquished at Last.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

I AM moving across the country with a jovially painted wagon. Listen for the strains of my brass band.

Have you got a pain?
Are you inclined to gloomy thoughts?
Have you got backache, earache, headache or any other sort of ache?
Do your ears ring? Do you enjoy the most awful dreams?

Do you want to live to be 100 years old, and then some more?

Look for and wait for Pilgrim Joe. He can remove all your troubles. None of my remedies are to be found at reputable drug stores. They are not offered as premiums with tea or coffee.

With the band a-playing the tune of "The Old Plug Hat" I was drawing nigh the town of Ace High with a song in my heart. In my pocket I had a wad of money about as big as a shingle; there was my old boss and tintype outfit; there was my fighting dog and my grasshopper in a bottle. And, to crown all, there was my Pilgrim Pain Alleviator, the grandest and noblest remedy for human ailments placed before the public since the Mayflower came to anchor and the pilgrim fathers went looking for herbs and roots.

There are other medicines on the market, but only an alleviator. When you buy a bottle of it you can have just as much confidence in its virtues as in the word of a member of congress.

TO BENEFIT OTHER SUFFERERS

You May Publish My Letter About "Fruit-a-tives"

Mr. Jones is proud to acknowledge the great debt of gratitude he owes "Fruit-a-tives". He is glad to have his letter published in order that other sufferers may be induced to try these wonderful tablets made of fruit juices.

SARNIA, ONT., FEB. 5th. 1911

"I have been a sufferer for the past 25 years with Constipation, Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. I tried many remedies and many doctors, but derived no benefit whatever. Finally, I read an advertisement for "Fruit-a-tives". I decided to give "Fruit-a-tives" a trial and they did exactly what was claimed for them. I have now taken them for some time and find they are the only remedy that does me good. I have recommended "Fruit-a-tives" to a great many of my friends, and I cannot praise these fruit tablets too highly"

PAUL J. JONES.

soon had him on hand. The insects were placed in an empty starch box on the grass, and though I always strive to follow in the footsteps of integrity, I thought it no wrong to take as many side bets as were offered. One of these—for $20—was with the washing machine man. They yelled to the beetle to go in and make the splinters fly, while I said not a word.

In five minutes it was all over, and the beetle lay on his back as dead as a politician caught with the goods on him. The crowd was dumb for a minute, and men began to growl at me. Then the feeling changed, and I was cheered and applauded and given the freedom of the town in a tobacco box.

For two days I took tintypes at 10 cents a take, and when I was ready to leave I had also disposed of three dozen bottles of my alleviator. The washing machine man had departed ahead of me, but four miles out of town he was awaiting my coming. As I drove up he said:

"Old fraud, I want them $20 back."

"Not skassly," I replied, in all kindness.

"Mebbe you don't know that hell hath no fury like a woman scorned?"

"But you hadn't wearing petticoats."

The Duel.

"But I've been scorned jest the same, and one of us is going to get broken bones."

I saw that it was one of those cases where my alleviator would fail to cure, and I got down from the wagon and took off my coat and prepared to uphold my honor. He of the washing machine—warranted to do the largest family washing in twenty minutes without injury to the most delicate fabrics—was not long in coming. His eyes were rolling and his teeth clanking, to our grandmothers. They are pieces of furniture, most 12 by 18 inches square perched they stand from eight to twelve inches above the floor. Some, however, are smaller, perhaps eight inches wide, a foot long and four inches above the floor. These have little arms or handles and can be easily carried to place.

Designs of various sorts seem to lead in popularity. Even in formal drawing rooms, it is to have the footstools designed with reference to the rest of the furniture, but a mahogany footstool of colonial design fits in harmony in any room where mahogany furniture is used.

Footstools are made for the room furnished in this style, light oak frames in the various styles applied to mission furniture, upholstered in leather or burlap, sometimes made with cane and cane tops, too, are shown in mahogany frames. The canisters illustrated are other household articles which are being made of mahogany, and in certain rooms the effect is good.

NO NEEDLE SHOWER.

Give Bride Elect a Useful and Unique Shower.

It is not always easy to think of a new gift for entertainment, but recently originated the pinle shower. The notes of the instrument but three weeks in addition to a dozen intimate friends, handmade, unpasted envelopes, with common pins. Each girl is to bring a gift of pins and equipment, the word needle, interpreted rather broadly.

There were many consultations, so gifts should not be duplicated. Aught a fair sized handmade set, another a dozen spools of useful colors, a third a fine cutting shears, still another a pair of scissors. There were several bags for the bit of fancy special bag for crochet work, a dry bag and a tiny mending bag with two reels of thread, a thimble and scissors, all that it went into the everyday bag or purse. There were possibly and the needle should be brought up again with the one action about one-eighth of an inch away ready for the next loop. The center of the applique flower has a dark brown satin stitch spot worked on the ecru linen. Round this are six of the broken chain stitch spots in coral color, the dart on the flower petal is in sloping satin stitch of the same color, as also are the little radiating stamen stalks. The spots or anthers are a pale soft yellow, worked in the chain spots but radiating in the same direction as the little stalks. The green hem is faced on to the ground linen.

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW.

Finely ground dry coffee grounds make a good filling for pincushions.

Before frying liver dip each piece in milk, and then it fries a rich brown and is not hard.

By adding common table salt to gasoline spots can be removed from the most delicate fabrics without leaving a ring around the places cleaned.

To clean hardwood casings add one pint of sweet milk to a pan of water. It will remove all dust and leave the wood looking bright and clean.

In attaching the stamp to be inclosed in a letter by means of a wire clip, which is a great improvement over the old method of moistening one corner, turn the face of the stamp toward the paper and there will be no danger of the metal leaving a disfiguring mark.

"Go away from me," said the fashionably dressed woman to the tramp. "I wouldn't have you touch me for a dollar."

THE MAKING OF WORDS.

Curious Origin of Some of Our Most Common Expressions.

In the "Romance of Words," a publication by an English author, much space is devoted to "aphesis," which means a gradual or unintentional loss of an unaccented vowel at the beginning of a word. This kind of word shrinkage is more common than one might suppose.

Sometimes the middle syllable of a word will be slurred to the point of extinction. From Mary Magdalene, tearful and penitent, comes the word maudlin. Sacristan is contracted into sexton; the old French word paralysie becomes palsy; hydropisie becomes dropsy, and the word procurator becomes proctor in English. Bethlehem Hospital For Lunatics, established in London, came to be telescoped into bedlam, much as Cholmondeley came to be Chumley and Majoribanks Marshbanks. Peel is for appeal, mend for amend, lone for alone, fender, whether before a fireplace or outside a ship, is for defender; fence for defense, taint for attain.

The word peach, commonly regarded as English thief slang, goes back to the time of Shakespeare and is related to impeach, though used to indicate informing against an accomplice. The word cad is for Scotch caddie, once an errand boy, now familiar in connection with golf. Caddie is from the French word cadet, meaning a junior or younger brother.—Indianapolis News.

market, but only an alleviator. When you buy a bottle of it you can have just as much confidence in its virtues as in the word of a member of congress.

No trust handles it.

You don't have to divvy with a member of the legislature.

There is no whack coming to the alderman of your ward.

It soothes a broken heart as well as a broken leg.

He Feels Giddy.

None genuine without a yell label on the bottle. The yellower the label the more genuine the contents.

As I was saying, I felt giddy over my many virtues as I was driving along, and I entered the town named with my hat on my ear and exhilaration in my heart. I was soon made aware that my welcome was not what it should be, and I speedily ascertained the cause thereof. A seller of washing machines who had proposed a partnership with me and had been turned down and ached for revenge had been in the town for two days spreading stories to my detriment. He had made a special point on my grasshopper, making out that I was cruel to animals and therefore sordid and wicked at my heart. I had skassly reached the tavern where I was going to put up when a knot of choice and eminent citizens, headed by the mayor, appeared, and the latter said:

"This town of Ace High hain't so very much on business, but it is ready to bank its last dollar on sentiment. A critter who will go at it deliberately and maliciously to blast the life of an innocent grasshopper is not welcome among us. You have just five minits in which to skate!"

"Sir," says I in reply. "do I look like a critter who'd steal food from in front of a cricket or strike an orphan grasshopper with a club?"

"Not skassly, but hain't it true that you are carrying around a hopper in a bottle agin his will and desires? It is for hoppers to hop, to play and gambol, to frisk and frolic. When you have got one corked up in a bottle, what must his feelings be?"

"I'll show you," says I, as I bring out the bottle. "I found this hopper on a wide prairie two years ago. He was cold and hungry. He had been abandoned and war afraid. He was in peril and had given up hopes. I rescued him, and he has been with me ever since, and there hain't a day that he don't try to testify his gratitude. Once a day I let him out to perform his circus acts, as follers."

Amusing the Crowd.

With that I poured the hopper out on the grass, and he amused the crowd for ten minutes with his circus and then returned to the bottle.

"There don't seem to be nothing cruel about that," says the mayor. "Why, I keep a beetle in a cigar box myself, and I can't say that he is suffering any. Stranger, does it happen that your hopper is anything of a fighter?"

"Only jest enough to maintain his rights in this world."

"Bekase, if he was a bit of a fighter and you had $10 to back him I would bring out my beetle. The town of Ace High has 150 virtues to its credit, but we dearly loves a little scrap now and then."

I intimated my willingness to bring about a tragedy and produced my dough, and he sent for his beetle and machine—warranted to do the largest family washing in twenty minutes without injury to the most delicate fabrics—was not long in coming. His eyes were rolling and his teeth clanking, and any one not depending on Providence might have turned and fled at the sight. As it was, I met him with a right hand swing that rolled him over on the grass, and while he was wondering where he was at I piled on to him and gave him that for which he hankered.

He was a licked man inside of three minits, and when I mounted my vehicle and drove away he was sitting up and realizing that he who hath his quarrel just is just the feller to give the other one a good walloping.

There was peace in my heart as I drove on. I was saying to myself that virtue and integrity were the two jokers in the pack when a man riding a blind hoss turned in on me from a crossroad and stumped me for a trade. When I did not show any great amount of enthusiasm he pretended to recognize my animal as one stolen from him two years before and demanded that I give up his property. A man may be a twin brother to integrity and still be posted on the game of bluff. I saw that he was talking through the top of his hat, and I smiled benignly at him and may have winked at the same time. Then he got off his blind steed and made as if he would unhitch mine whether or no. Giving my skinned knuckles a lick with my tongue and feeling, as in the other case, that Providence was with me bigger'n a house, I descended and closed in.

The bluffer was not all bluff. He made a fairly good fight of it, but when I had settled him with a solar plexus blow I felt it my duty to wallop him a few times more to show my good will. I left him softly sleeping and snoring as he slept, and as I drove on, I was fain to say to myself:

"He who tackles integrity tackles a haystack."

And further:

"Virtue sits enthroned on a mountain top and can't be hauled off her nest by the neck. If thou wouldst get the best of virtue spread sticky fly paper at her feet and smile softly."

And again:

"Honesty was never known to pay more than 10 per cent, but he who is a hog as to interest will sooner or later lose his bristles thereby."

There Were Others.

"John, I want the baby named Paul."
"My dear, Paul was a woman hater."
"Mercy! Did you think I meant that Paul? I'm naming him for Paul Jones."—Chicago Tribune.

Smith—Jones seems to have no thought for anything except his clothes. Brown—Yes; he is perfectly wrapped up in them.

The regular meeting of the N. F. L., was held in the W.C.T.U. rooms, on Wednesday afternoon, and proved very interesting, as it was well attended. To be sure a few of the smaller boys, forgetting that women are not greatly disturbed by trifles, entertained the members by intermittent showers of peas. Miss Caroline Perry read a very interesting paper in favor of the militant movement, the best phases of which she presented in excellent form. Miss E. Warner also gave an enjoyable reading. Mr. Fox kindly favored the meeting with a delightful little speech showing a thinking-man's opinions on woman's rights. The discussion was spirited and showed a lively interest as well as a good grasp of the subject in question. Why has the masculine element again faded since anti-suffrage workers are very welcome? Despite this the League is certainly prosperous and worthy of support.

The Court of Revision meets in the council chamber at the town hall on Monday evening next at 7.30 o'clock. The question of the sewer adjustment will be the main item, and, judging by the dissatisfaction being expressed by some of the citizens assessed, it will be a lively meeting.

Sweeping amendments to the motor vehicles act, suggested by George H. Gooderham, were adopted last week by the Municipal Committee of the Ontario Legislature. In future every driver of a motor car in the province must carry a license. This means that everyone driving an automobile must be subject to a complete system of registration, and have an official license. The clause went through after a stormy discussion.

On Tuesday morning two employees of the Hamilton Bridge Works who are erecting the steel work for the new building of the Napanee Iron Works, fell from the top of the structure, a distance of about 25 feet to the ground. One end of the scaffold on which they were working gave away causing the accident. One of the men escaped with a skinned arm but the other, a man weighing over 200 pounds, in falling struck one of the cement piers on which the ironwork rests and sustained a broken ankle, a badly cut head, besides hurting his back. After medical attention both men were taken to Hamilton on the next train.

W. C. T. U.

Those who were present at the W.C.T.U. open meeting in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, felt they had a rare treat in listening to Mrs. Hyslop, Dominion Organizer for the Society. After a very entertaining and interesting programme of music Mrs. Hyslop was introduced to the audience by the chairman, R. J. P. Wilson. In an address of over an hour she carried a deeply interested audience through many phases of this great inter-denomination and international work, tragic enough at times when she related actual facts in her own experience but which she brightened in places with her quaint Scotch humor. Space will not allow mention of the many good things she said, but possibly the most pertinent for us as Canadians to consider, in the age of awakening nationalism, is the expenditure of over four millions more on our liquor bill than on our bread bill, and this in a country, she declared, that was voted the most temperate of all at the great international convention held in Canada some time ago. It is a regrettable fact that, as voters, more men were not present, but those who were made up in sympathy what they lacked in numbers. With such products as Mrs. Hyslop if what she declared to be distinctly the woman's age, the W.C.T.U., must advance in this world's work when it has such women overseeing the work. In closing she reminded her audience that no other argument for local option was needed save that out of the two hundred or more municipalities in which it could have been repealed only twenty had tried to repeal it, with but one success.
